City unveils September econ news

The Virginia Beach Department of Economic Development activities during the month of September 1985 included:

Convention Promotion

Virginia Beach, represented by Convention Bureau Sales Representative Dick Kinsley, was the successful bidder for two major national conventions in September.

Kinsley overcame bids by Nashville and Orlando to land the 1987 national convention of the Fleet Reserve Association, that will bring more than 1,000 FRA members and their families to the Beach in a floor vote at the San Antonio convention. Virginia Beach attracted 2,809 votes to Orlando's 1,896.

Several weeks later Kinsley travelled to Rapid City to bid on the 1988 convention of the Society of 40 & 8, a division of the American Legion. The competition was Indianapolis. Virginia Beach was again the winner, and will host more than 2,000 veterans and their families for that national gathering.

Hurricane Gloria forced the cancellation of the annual convention of the Virginia Association of Volunteer Rescue Squads set for the Virginia Beach Pavilion. Lost revenue to the city's hospitality industry is estimated at $525,000. The Convention Bureau had booked more than 2,900 room nights for the group. The tax loss is estimated at $26,250.

On a happier note, the 1985 convention for the Mid-Atlantic Shrine Association in early September earned the city in excess of $3.5 million, with tax receipts of $175,000.

According to MASA President James Epperson of Portsmouth, registration for the convention was the largest ever recorded by the organization. Particular mention was made of the "look" of Atlantic Avenue that was festooned with "Welcome, Nobles" banners that had been rented by individual hotels and restaurants. Mayor Harold Heischberger and Chief of Police Charles Wall officially welcomed the Shrine. Despite the intense heat the Grand Parade went off without a hitch. Many city employees played important roles in the success of the convention.

The September issue of Virginia, the monthly newsletter of the state's Division of Tourism, carries an article on the meetings industry and the tremendous growth in conference facilities across the state, written by Hugh Barton, Manager of the city's Convention Bureau. Barton is President of the Virginia Association of Convention and Visitors Bureaus, made up of 15 cities, counties and areas throughout the Commonwealth.

Virginia Beach Visitor Information Center

Visitor Information Center walk-ins in September, 1985 totalled 10,271. For the month of September 1984, this figure was 10,573.

Tourist inquiries January thru September of 1985 reached 111,981. Inquiries January thru September of 1984 totalled 112,827.

Tourist Development Division personnel began work on the 1986 Accommodations and Campground Directory.

Tourist Development

Hotel Sales in July 1985 reached $17,620,168, a 16.2% increase over July 1984 sales of $15,161,232.

F.O.P. lodge transforms from lounge into house of worship

By Gayle C. Foster

Special to the Virginia Beach Sun

"The band plays on Saturday night and I preach on Sunday morning," says Steven Thompson, pastor of Red Wing Baptist Church, whose members meet at the Fraternal Order of Police (F.O.P.) Lodge at 976 South Birdneck Road.

The members, young and old alike, participate in the transformation from lodge to church each Sunday morning. "Our people walk in, take their coats off, roll up their sleeves, and create the sanctuary setting," said Rev. Thompson.

Tables of the restaurant/bar, its pool table and dance floor, are concealed in a matter of minutes. Portable walls construct the classrooms and a nursery is set up in an adjoining office. Tables and chairs are shifted, banners are hung, and a moveable stained glass window is placed in front of the speaker's podium.

Thompson's perception "that beginning a church from scratch was the ultimate thing a minister could do," led him from a comfortable pastorate in Ahoskie, North Carolina, to start a mission church in Virginia Beach. "Since I grew up in this area and like the beach atmosphere, a friend advised me to take a look at my hometown," said Rev.

"It was difficult in the beginning," said Gloria Thompson.

"We left good jobs and a great deal of security. Now we really know that the Lord fully intended for us to be here. I am thankful that Steven was so committed to the Lord and his work."

Thompson. "As I investigated the possibilities, the need for a new congregation in Virginia Beach became obvious. I discovered that there is only one church for every 4000 residents." Thompson contacted local church leaders and knocked on the doors of perspective members. "People were receptive to the idea of a new church, but not in starting one themselves," he said. "Most wanted to wait and see."

28 degrees

Rev. Thompson and his wife, Gloria, moved their family to Virginia Beach on Saturday, Dec. 31, 1983. In spite of 28-degree weather, Thompson conducted his service of dedication to the Lord at Red Wing Park the following morning. From that first service, with its congregation of one, attendance increased steadily to 75 worshippers.

"We were told repeatedly that it couldn't be done," said Thompson, "but we are doing it."

"It was difficult in the beginning," said Gloria Thompson. "We left good jobs and a great deal of security. Now we really know that the Lord fully intended for us to be here. I am thankful that Steven was so committed to the Lord and his work."

Thompson, 33, worked at a variety of part-time jobs to keep the ministry going until the First Baptist Church of Virginia Beach

Handicapped, elderly may get tax breaks

By Lee Cahill

City Council Reporter

City Council has decided to ask the General Assembly for authority to extend personal property tax breaks to its elderly and handicapped citizens.

The request brings to 29 the proposals the city plans to present to the General Assembly for action during the 1986 session in January. Three of the proposals involve a change in the city charter which require public hearings before they can be presented to the State Legislature. In endorsing its legislative package Monday afternoon, Council also set the public hearings for Council's night meeting on Nov. 25 at 7 p.m. and its Dec. 2 meeting at 2 p.m.

"We'll probably get 100"

100 in three hours. That's how many crabs Lamar Gregory and his son Bryan, 7, will trap on a good day.

Recently, while crabbing at the Rudee Inlet Loop Wayside, they had caught four dozen in just 75 minutes. "I'll probably get 100 before I leave," he said, hauling in two more of the delicious "blue claw" crabs, many of which were medium-sized and barnacled.

Gregory said that with so many crabs, he sells some and keeps the rest.

"We've even had crab pizza," Bryan boasted.

Council approves bonds

City Council Monday afternoon approved the issuance of $11 million industrial development revenue bonds to F. C. Associates for a 400-unit multi-family rental family project for the elderly. The project will consist of 250 units for elderly housing and a 150-bed nursing center.

General partners in the project are Jeff McKain, Paul Karsers, Barry Fine, Howard Gray, Grayson M. Whitehurst Jr. and Lawrence R. Siegel.

The project will be located on 19.4 acres of land at 1001 Camelot Drive.

Council cancels Dec. 23 meeting

City Council has cancelled its pre-Christmas meeting of Dec. 23. Dec. 30 is the fifth Monday, a no-meeting day, which will give Council two days off during the holidays.

Council also has no meeting next Monday, Nov. 11, Veterans Day, a city holiday.

Beth Sholom Sands, Luther Manor, Russell House public hearing slated

By Lee Cahill
City Council Reporter

Three non-profit organizations have been granted public hearings on Nov. 25 as a required step in their efforts to achieve tax-exempt status.

City Council Monday afternoon unanimously approved the public hearings for Beth Sholom Sands, Luther Manor and Russell House, all homes for elderly, low income residents.

The homes had originally been exempt from real estate taxes, but were advised prior to opening that the exemptions were not applicable.

P. S. Cook representing Luther Manor, said that the homes are asking Council to rescind the taxes already imposed and to pass a resolution requesting delegates to sponsor a bill exempting them from future real estate taxes.

Council scheduled the public hearing after which it is expected to endorse the resolution. Cook said that Del. Owen Pickett said he would introduce the bill in the General Assembly.

Council has been reluctant to consider tax exemptions because of a lack of clear guidelines on which organizations should or should not be exempt. The homes were all built with Department of Housing and Urban Development funding granted for low-income housing.

The average income of Beth Sholom Sands residents is $5,772, for Luther Manor, $6,029, and for Russell House, $5,517.

The income ceiling for residents is $8850. Cook said that 30 of the Luther Home residents receive food stamps and 20 volunteers work at the home. Mary Ellen Cox, representing Russell House, said that if the residents lived in their own homes they would be eligible for real estate tax exemptions. She said the average age of the residents is 74 years. Vann Lefcoe, of Beth Sholom, said that since the organization was originally classified as tax exempt the taxes were not included in the rent. He said that all other homes of this type in the state have tax relief.

Councilman John A. Baum said that he would like an official agency to do the screening of organizations applying for tax exemption, but Council members agreed that the three homes furnished sufficient criteria for making a decision.

The State Constitution was changed in 1981, establishing a procedure for acquiring tax exemption. This includes a public hearing called by the governing body of the locality, followed by a resolution by Council and finally approval by the General Assembly.

Council had criteria drawn to help evaluate the organizations. Council will review the criteria at a workshop on Nov. 18.

Baum said the old Constitution, which left the city out of the deliberations, addressed the problem better than the new.

Virginia Marine Science Museum expected to open in March, '86

Work is continuing on the $7.2 million Virginia Marine Science Museum, which is expected to open to the public in March, 1986, according to its director, C. Mac Rawls.

Resting on an 11-acre parcel of land, the museum's groundbreaking occurred in Oct., 1983. The 41,500 square-foot facility will feature, among other things, four major exhibit "habitat" areas, 100 "hands-on" exhibits and a 50,000-gallon aquarium. Most of the museum's major exhibits, about 20 of them, are being constructed out of town by exhibit fabricators. The museum is located on Owl's Creek at Rudee Inlet, on General Booth Boulevard.

Missing

On Nov. 11 Virginia Beach along with the rest of the country will recognize the veterans who have fought for this country in various wars throughout this world.

In many ways we as Americans have been fortunate that no war has touched this country's soil in this century. One of the most severe impacts of having American soldiers fight in other countries is that it is difficult to account for the ones who never return.

Such is the ongoing dilemma with Vietnam.

According to a Prisoner of War/Missing in Action Briefing from the National League of Families of American Prisoners Missing in Southeast Asia, in the decades since official U.S. involvement in the Vietnam War came to an end and nearly 600 American prisoners of war were returned, the Vietnamese have been less than cooperative in accounting for prisoners who did not return and providing information on the missing. As a result, 2,483 American servicemen and civilians are still missing and unaccounted for in Indochina.

Khaki gone

Khaki has been kicked out of the Army after serving its country faithfully for 40 years.

No longer will sergeants be able to pop their heads into squad tents and ask their men: "Are you happy in your khaki?"

Now, it will have to be a question something like, "Are you men feeling keen in your green?"

Uniforms of khaki color began fading out in 1981. That was when the Army decided it could save money by sticking solely to green uniforms.

The first time U.S. troops used the khaki was way back in the Spanish-American War.

It was essential to find a hot-weather uniform for soldiers serving in Cuba and the Philippines, and Americans decided to adopt the British army garb in the hue of khaki—a word from India that meant dust color.

The U.S. Army switched to olive drab from 1910 to 1933 and then back to khaki after World War II.

Now khaki has been mustered out.

From now on it's going to be green, and any khaki pants or shirts left over can be donated to the Salvation Army.—C.E.C.

The Walker 'settlement'

While we don't want to make a habit of second-guessing the Justice Department, we'd have to side with Navy Secretary John Lehman's views on the Walker Spy Case.

Lehman was sharply critical of the plea bargain arrangement announced last week in which John A. Walker Jr. will receive a life sentence and son Michael Walker a 25-year term.

In pleading guilty to a pair of espionage charges and one conspiracy charges (three spy charges were dropped in the legal maneuvering) John Walker will be eligible for parole in ten years, his son after eight years.

The government's lawyers assure us that the Walkers will, in reality, serve longer stretches. But they are the same ones selling the "arrangement," so we remain skeptical.

While the son was obviously a dupe acting on his father's orders, the elder Walker was an active Soviet spy over an 18-year period.

His crime was no short-term error in judgement, nor was it solely an outgrowth of the "Cold War, mentality" in which professional spies are treated as white collar criminals to be exchanged for one another.

Walker spied for the Russians when they were active allies of the North Vietnamese—our enemies during our tragic involvement in Vietnam.

If that doesn't constitute treason during war-time, try telling it to a crippled Vietnam vet or to the parents of one of the 48,000 American soldiers who died during that unholy conflict.

We are not calling for a return to the days when young Pfc's were shot for breaking down under enemy interrogation.

But we do wonder if American justice has been served by the Walker settlement.

And we hope someone who lost a son in Vietnam sits on John Walker's parole board.—G.K.G.

Barn owl study

Editor, The Virginia Beach Sun:

I am a master's degree student at the College of William and Mary evaluating the status of Virginia's barn owls.

I am trying to help their population by erecting nest boxes. In order to do this efficiently on the statewide level, I am trying to solicit barn owl reports from the public.

Barn owls are declining and reports of nesting or nonnesting barn owls are needed for a project which will increase their numbers.

Please include county, the nearest route number, and property owner's name. Reports will be kept confidential.

Barn owls can be distinguished from other owls by their white heart-shaped faces, dark eyes, and light underparts with golden upper plumage.

Instead of "hooting," they screech and hiss. They are frequently found in barns, silos, and tree cavities.

You can help barn owls by putting up a nest box on your property. Send a self-addressed and stamped envelope to:

Books

By

Mary Mayer-Hennelly

A trip to any Virginia Beach book store will convince one that substantial thought and attention have been directed toward working women.

Self-help titles reflect the feminine need "to have it all," how to have quality time with your children, how to deal with stresses peculiar to women managers and how to best utilize time to efficiently accomplish domestic and job duties are among the most popular topics in this subject area.

Hilary Cosell's Woman on a Seesaw/The Ups and Downs of Making It takes exception to the notion that women can and want to be Superwoman. Her premise is that many women today feel trapped by pressures unknown to their mothers several decades ago.

Through thoughtful interviews with women of varying backgrounds and positions, Cosell presents the case that women are now questioning the conflicts between their personal and professional lives. Trying to balance the demands of both can be painful for some and unbearable for others.

Cosell acknowledges that many women in this era of choice must work for economic reasons. Even those who don't feel financial constraints often experience the dissatisfaction of being torn between the two sides of their lives. She also focuses upon the lack of empathy between older career women and those now in their childbearing years.

"She is that other generation (we) talked about, the first wave, the ones who got marriage and children out of the way, so to speak, and fulfilled the traditional and very private desire to 'be a woman' and then said, so what else is there?" This issue constitutes a serious misunderstanding between the current generations of women.

Woman on a Seesaw is a readable discussion of the conflicts felt by contemporary women who are challenging the accepted definition of success. In addressing the idea that "women may have concerns that are different but as valid as men's," Cosell has furthered the debate that Superwoman is not Everywoman.

Halley is the most famous

By P. A. Ianna
Associate Professor of Astronomy
University of Virginia

Although months away, the coming appearance of Comet Halley is generating as much excitement as in ancient times when comets were regarded as mysterious omens of momentous events. While the chance of a lifetime for most, seeing the celestial display may not quite live up to some of the advance billing.

Comet Halley, though not the biggest or brightest of the comets known, is the most famous. The comet is named after Sir Edmund Halley, who first noted the comet had appeared at 75-year intervals. Its visits have been recorded 29 times since 240 B.C. and most recently in 1910. Mark the next visit for 2061 A.D.

Comets have three parts—a nucleus, coma and tail. The nucleus is the small core of the comet. Often compared with a "dirty snowball," it consists mainly of ice and dust. The nucleus of Comet Halley may be as small as five miles in diameter.

The coma is a spherical cloud of dust and gases released from the nucleus by heat from the sun as the comet approaches. For Comet Halley the coma is expected to reach a diameter of around 60,000 miles.

The tail of Halley's will stretch several million miles. It is formed as the matter in the coma is blown outward by pressure of the sun's radiation and the outward wind of solar particles. The tail does not stream behind the comet but always points away from the sun. This material forming the tail is irretrievably lost, so comets eventually "wear out."

Unfortunately, Halley's showing this year will not be all spectacular. The Earth will be on the other side of its orbit three times farther away from the comet than in 1910, and the comet will be almost ten times dimmer. Although bright by comet standards, Halley's will not be as bright as the moon. At its best, it will appear only as a faint streak in the sky, just visible to the naked eye, just above

Sprucing up the old vocabulary

By Greg Glassner

I was looking for a convenient place to stash the new edition of the phone book, the other day, when I ran across a dusty black tome that had been residing in the nether reaches of my desk for who knows how long.

Wayward Thoughts

No set of Shakespeare's lost sonnets, nor an original edition of Moby Dick, but a rare book, indeed, for the few moments of pleasure it brought on an otherwise dull afternoon.

It was a revised 1947 edition of Hartramp's Vocabulary-Builders, a gem of wisdom and well-meaning aid that I had heretofore not encountered.

Since I'd heard that self-help books were all the rage again, I opened the volume to the first few pages and began reading. On the day before a sincere young man had asked me if I believed that newspapers really were aimed at a sixth grade mentality, as someone had told him.

Perhaps I'd best stop pandering to prepubescents and start targeting an age group that's at least dry behind the ears, thought I, as I thumbed through Gustavus A. Hartramp's life's work.

"Let us assume that you are a motion-picture critic faced with the need for describing the newest and brightest performance of Hollywood's leading comedienne," it was noted in the preface. "You try with such adjectives as gay, laughable, entertaining and clever, but all of them lack freshness and vigor..."

"So you turn to Hartramp's Vocabulary-Builders and...there you will find...blithe, engaging, vivacious, droll, gladsome, joyous and many others."

Hmmm...come to think of it, I have read a movie review apparently written by students of Hartramp's Vocabulary-Builders.

On the last page of the preface, however, Hartramp gets into the meat of the matter:

"An increase in your vocabulary unlocks, once and for all time, doors that have been previously locked. It not only makes for material success, but for happiness, a new capacity to enjoy pleasures you may not even have been aware of."

Boy howdy!

Even though I know a few English teachers who would have rearranged those last few words to say: "...of which you may not even have been aware," who can resist obtaining the power to see behind those locked doors, get rich and take on a few sybaritic pleasures?

Since I had been sulking since scoring only a 17 on the latest Regents Digest vocabulary test, I figured my arsenal of words could use some sprucing up—to say nothing of perhaps chancing across one or two of the aforementioned unknown pleasures.

Indeed, by flipping through just a few pages, I learned that a redwax was a kind of Bohemian dance, that decrythology was the art of engraving on gemstones and that a margravate was the territory ruled by a margrave.

"Useful stuff, this," I exclaimed, for, I had long been a fan of the margrave of Baden-Durlach, without ever knowing that he ruled over a margravate.

I quickly cross-referenced my three new words using my favorite edition of Webster's New World Dictionary and found that two of them had been purged from common usage by 1976.

That in mind, I dusted Hartramp's and placed it on my bookshelf in an honored position alongside Appleton's Revised Spanish Dictionary and Volume I of Funk & Wagnall's New Encyclopedia, which I obtained at a grocery store for 49 cents.

Citizens can impact public school system

LET'S TALK

By Gary Blumenstein, president, Virginia Beach Education Association

Is it possible for the average citizen to have an impact on the direction of the Virginia Beach City Public Schools?

Cynics cry no. They claim the system is so large and intransigent that it doesn't matter what "John Q. Public" wants, the system will turn a deaf ear.

Optimists opine yes. They acknowledge that bureaucracy is difficult to influence but firmly believe that good ideas are considered and good suggestions will ultimately prevail.

Most citizens don't really know if individual efforts can help shape the future of a huge urban school system. My advice is to try it. You might be pleasantly surprised. And, why not start with the school board budget?

Big Budget

The current school budget of $161 million is used to provide public education to approximately 60,000 Virginia Beach children. The staff needed to provide these services numbers about 6,000 with more than half being teachers.

Schooling is a people business and approximately 85 percent of any school budget is used for salary and benefits. Salary increases and the addition of 300 new positions to accommodate increased student enrollments account for $16 million of the $20 million increase in the current budget over the 1984-85 budget. Ultimately, that leaves $4 million to be shared for repairs to buildings and grounds or improving the instructional program. It is expected to take $1.8 million for repairs and maintenance of buildings and equipment leaving $2.2 million for enhanced instructional services this year. And this is where the action begins.

If you had approximately $36 per student to use for improvements in this public school system, what would your priorities be?

Would you move toward lowering class size? Maybe you would want to reduce class size in the primary grades. Do you favor more offerings for our gifted and talented children?

Are you concerned about the decline in elective course offerings brought about by increased graduation requirements in basic courses and the lack of a true seven-bell day? Does not the embryonic orchestra program need to be nurtured and enhanced? Maybe you just want more basic supplements to the math and reading program. The list of needed improvements goes on and on.

Nov. 19 Hearing

Whatever your priorities are for improving the Virginia Beach School System, they will be listened to at the November 19 School Board hearing.

It is easy to put your ideas and suggestions before the school board. Merely call the Department of Financial Services prior to the meeting and ask that your name be placed upon the agenda. The telephone number of that office is 427-4756. The hearing is scheduled to begin at 7:30 p.m. in the school board meeting room.

Not only will the school board members listen, but Financial Services will do a cost estimate on your idea and present that information to the school board at a subsequent meeting.

Citizens can make a difference. Over the last several years at school board budget hearings the school board was presented with requests to provide a full-time nurse in each school. This year the decision was made to provide the funds necessary to provide a full-time nurse for all students. It wasn't even the case where the school board didn't want a full-time nurse. The citizen lobby merely helped the administration and school board members re-establish their priorities. We truly wanted and needed a nurse in every school and the school board acted responsibly.

As citizens, we have the opportunity to promote our vested interest in public education. While the process may be slow, and even cumbersome at times, our efforts do reap improvements. Just as teachers should never give up trying to help children learn, citizens should never relinquish their opportunity to guide and improve our public schools.

Attending Sunday School classes at the FOP Lodge, left to right, are: Pastor Thompson; Jeannette and Robin Gibson; and Janet Hastings. Normally, there are about eight to 10 people attending services. This day, it was raining.

voted to sponsor the church in July, 1984. During that summer, the members met in the prayer garden at Red Wing Park. In mid-September, 13 members met for the first time at the F.O.P. Lodge.

"No one can realize how much the Thompsons have put into this church. They have always been there for anyone in the church. They are most concerned with the people."

—Jeannette Gibson.

Recently, a land search committee formed to check the availability of Beach property. "The cost of land is high and this will be an obstacle for us," Thompson said. "It will be interesting to see how God will work it out."

Thompson continued, "The community is beginning to know we're out there. Our hope and purpose is to share the message of Christ and minister to the spiritual needs of the people in our area."

Membership in this Southern Baptist Church can be attained through a profession of faith in God and through baptism by immersion, and with a letter of transfer from another church.

Jeannette and Robin Gibson joined the congregation at Red Wing Park. "We were reluctant to go there, because we knew how much work is involved with a new church. Yet, we found real joy there. Each one of us counts—we are not just another face in the crowd," says Jeannette Gibson. She goes on to say, "no one can realize how much the Thompsons have put into this church. They have always been there for anyone in the church. They are most concerned with the people."

Thompson is a graduate of Kellam High School, the College of William and Mary, and South-eastern Baptist Seminary.

Steven and Gloria Thompson reside in Virginia Beach with their three sons, Adam, 10, Brandon eight, and Clayton, four.

Thompson has pastored churches in Virginia and North Carolina. "Coming here was difficult. There were no open doors. It was hard to get here and hard to stay. However, we have endured and learned as well," said Thompson.

"It takes special people to worship as we do—to disregard the lack of pews, cushions, and an organ," said Thompson, "but there is a place for everybody who wants to worship at Red Wing Baptist Church. I invite and encourage you to grow with us as we accomplish our goals and build an exciting, dynamic church!"

At College Park

Charity car show, autocross

The Tidewater Sports Car Club (TSCC) will present a charity autocross and car show on Sunday, Nov. 10, at College Park Square Shopping Center in Virginia Beach. Most of the proceeds from "The Veterans' Benefit Autocross and Car Show" will be donated to the Tidewater Chapter of the Vietnam Veterans of America (VVOA). A TSCC spokesman said.

The event will feature an appearance by a local radio personality.

An autocross is a competitive time trial in which drivers maneuver, one car at a time, through a series of rubber traffic pylons. The pylons simulate a scaled-down road course with left and right hand turns, and straight sections. The benefit autocross is open to area club members, as well as those non-members who desire to test their driving skills and their car's handling ability. The autocross will be of moderate speed, ideal for beginners and challenging for experienced competitors.

The autocross is the third in a four-event TSCC series. Registration will open at 9 a.m., and the competition will begin at 10:30 a.m. Registration will close promptly at 1 p.m. Preregistration is encouraged.

Special trophies have been donated by area businesses and will be awarded at the end of the event, including:

• Fastest Time of the Day - Donated by Phase 1 Imported Car Parts.

• Fastest Imported Stock Car - Donated by Phase 1 Imported Machine Service.

• Fastest Prepared Car on Imported Radials - Donated by National Tire Wholesale (NTW).

• Fastest Veteran - Donated by Mustang Sally Racing.

• Fastest Ford - Donated by Mustang Sally Racing.

• Donated by a local AAMCO Transmission shop.

The entry fee will be $9 or $8 for autocrossers coming from 60 miles or more for three attempts, or runs, on the course. Each run consists of three laps. A competitor's best run time counts toward class trophy and series points.

Metropolitan Washington (D.C.) rules, as modified by TSCC will be used. No alcoholic beverages are allowed at the autocross, or car show. Effective exhaust suppression is mandatory. All cars must pass a rigorous safety technical inspection prior to competing.

For additional autocross information, contact Mark Wilson at 622-2296, or the TSCC Information Hotline at 397-8106 (after 7 p.m.).

The car show is open to all enthusiasts, not only those with concourse-quality autos. In addition to sports cars, TSCC is hoping to attract classics, antiques, race cars, autocross cars, and special interest cars. Various marque clubs are welcome, including: Corvette, Mustang, Trans-Am, Porsche, Camaro, etc.

A fee will be charged to enter a car in the show. That fee will be donated directly to the Tidewater Chapter of the Vietnam Veterans of America (VVOA).

The "popular choice" car show winner will be determined by the most donations collected by a car owner, using collection boxes provided by TSCC. All donations will be donated to the VVOA. Trophies for the winner and runner-up will be presented the day of the car show. The trophies have been donated by Electronic Engineering Company, Inc. of Virginia Beach.

Car show entrants should set up their cars between 11 a.m. and noon. The show will last until 4 p.m.

The Vietnam Veterans' Chapter will have a table set up and members to distribute information on Veterans' issues and answer questions.

For additional car show information, contact Dean Hoyt at 486-6125, or the TSCC Info Hotline at 397-8106.

Some common sense, uncommon performance

By Doris Mozley

One technique I have found useful in maintaining some perspective during times of economic uncertainty and volatile, erratic markets is to focus on the investment philosophies followed by those professional investors who have accomplished the most difficult task facing any stock investor: Constantly making money in the market over an extended period of time.

One such investor is John Templeton, whose basic approach is to search among many worldwide equity markets for significantly undervalued companies—and then to be extremely patient until the stock market recognizes their values. Templeton's track record speaks for itself: For over 20 years, he has significantly outperformed every major market index.

Here are 20 of his common sense keys to investing in stocks.

(1) If you begin with prayer you can think more clearly and make fewer stupid mistakes.

(2) Share prices fluctuate much more widely than share values. Therefore, index funds will never produce the best total returns.

(3) By searching worldwide, you will find more bargains—and better bargains—than by studying the markets of only one country. Looking beyond one nation's markets adds diversification as well.

(4) When any method for selecting stocks becomes popular, then switch to unpopular methods. Too much company can spoil any share selection method or market timing formula.

(5) Never marry any single type of asset or selection method. Try to stay flexible, open-minded and skeptical.

(6) In free enterprise nations, the earnings on stock market indexes fluctuate around the replacement book value of the shares of the index.

(7) Take the contrarian approach. Buy when published predictions reflect an unusual level of gloom and sell when the consensus is unusually optimistic. In the stock market, the only way to get a bargain is to buy what most investors are selling.

(8) Bear markets and bull markets have always been temporary. Historically, share prices turn upward from one to 12 months before the bottom of the business cycle.

(9) It is impossible to produce a superior performance unless you do something different from the majority. If you buy the same securities as other investors, you will have the same results.

(10) Popularity with investors companies in which management owns a large stake generally will outperform the others.

(11) Too many investors focus on outlook and trend. Therefore, more profit is made by concentrating on value.

(12) The time to buy a stock is when the short-term owners have finished their selling and vice versa.

(13) Popularity with investors for particular industry or type of security has always proved temporary; when lost, it does not return for many years.

(14) Before buying a "bargain" stock, it is usually wise to wait until its price has outperformed the market for a month.

(15) The time to sell an asset is when you have found a better bargain to replace it.

(16) The best performance is produced by a person not a committee.

(17) Share price fluctuation is roughly proportional to the square root of the price (i.e., a $16 stock would have four point fluctuation, between $12 and $20).

(18) For all long-term investors there is only one objective: Maximum total real return after taxes.

(19) To buy when others are despondently selling and to sell when others are greedily buying requires the greatest fortitude—and the greatest reward.

(20) Achieving a good record is a lot harder than most people think. If you are not an expert yourself, hire one.

Fahey addresses crew

John Fahey, an Associate Professor at Old Dominion University and a member of the Virginia Beach City Public School Board, was the speaker at the 12th Annual Reunion of the crew members of the destroyer U.S.S. Corry, sunk off Utah Beach, Normandy, on D-Day, June 6, 1944.

The survivors of Corry have met for their annual reunion in many U.S. cities and have held two reunions in Normandy, France. This year's reunion was held at the Holiday Inn, 39th Street, Virginia Beach.

"Ethical Behavior: A Debt to Shipmates Left Behind." In his talk Fahey said, "When everyone now living might judge our actions to be foolish, senseless, and self-defeating, we should measure our course-of-action decisions by the obligations to our shipmates left behind, and ask whether our choices honor them and are worthy of their sacrifices."

Fahey provided personal examples of ethical dilemmas faced in a variety of endeavors: public service, vocation, politics, church, and the military.

City Council

Mayor Harold Heischobser appointed Councilwoman Barbara Henley and John A. Baum to prepare a procedure for the agenda to follow.

The issues requiring a charter change are:

*An increase in the bonded indebtedness limit to $10 million plus an increase in that limit reflecting the inflation rate since 1974 as documented in the Consumer Price Index plus the amount of bonded indebtedness retired in the previous year. The change would also allow the bonded indebtedness limit to grow by the increase in the Consumer Price Index of the preceding year.

*Broadening the powers of the city to allow the establishment of an ordinance of reasonable regulations and standards to prohibit the unnecessary removal of trees.

*To give the city powers to allow the establishment by ordinance of reasonable rules, regulations and schedules for the amortization of non-conforming signs within the City of Virginia Beach.

Rae LeSesne, of Kempsville, told Council that any change in the City Charter affects all people and all should have a voice. He said that merely holding a public hearing is inappropriate. He said that over the weekend all the present local General Assembly delegates and candidates for the offices were contacted and all stated a preference for a referendum on City Charter changes.

The request for enabling legislation for personal property tax exemptions came from Commissioner of the Revenue Robert Vaughan. He said that the exemptions would be granted along the same formula as real estate tax exemptions are granted on a sliding scale according to the income of the household. These exemptions start at 100 percent for households with incomes of $9,000 or lower. He said that the seeming affluence of people in Virginia Beach tends to distort the entire picture. He said that the average personal property tax is $127. Mayor Harold Heischobser said that at one time vehicles which were seven years old were dropped from the tax guide book. When the guide book started to place values on vehicles older than seven years old, people who had been paying the $4 minimum found themselves paying $35 to $40 in personal property taxes.

Mayor Harold Heischobser said however, that Council wanted to keep its legislative proposal list as streamlined as possible.

Councilwoman Barbara Henley moved that the item be included in the legislative package under the proposals of state-wide importance. The city has 14 proposals identified as state-wide and the remainder as local interest items.

Vaughan said that Del. Owen Pickett, has agreed to introduce the enabling legislation.

Council approved the portion by a vote of 8-0. Councilwoman Nancy Creech, Councilman Dr. J. Henry McCoy Jr. and Vice Mayor Reba McClanan were absent.

The votes on the legislative package were generally unanimous. However, Councilwoman Barbara Henley and Meyera Oberndorf and Councilman H. Jack Jennings Jr. registered "no" votes on the proposal to increase the bonding Authority.

Also there were differences in the increased highway construction and maintenance funding proposals. Oberndorf and Jennings voted against enabling legislation for a local option tax on gasoline. Oberndorf said that the city needed the support of the entire region to make a local tax work. Jennings voted against a state-wide road bond financed with a gasoline tax because the proposal did not include the stipulation that the money be spent only on highways as opposed to other types of transportation, such as mass transit.

In the highway recommendations, the city:

Supported a $500 million bond issue for the state with a statewide gas tax increase of two cents per gallon to pay off the loan in 20 years. Also the Council asked for enabling legislation for a local option tax on gasoline pointing out that a two-cents-a-gallon tax would raise approximately $2.4 million a year. No stipulation restricting the use of this money to highway construction was included here either. The enabling legislation would give all localities in Virginia the ability to enact a local option gas tax of up to four cents.

Heischobser said he would rather have the authority and not use it than want to use it and not have the authority.

Councilman John A. Baum also pointed out that mass transit is not an "anti-highway deal."

As the list got longer and longer, Councilman Robert G. Jones said that it was "like writing a letter to Santa Claus."

National group picks Helfant

Dorcas Helfant, a Virginia Beach, Virginia Realtor, has been elected as the 1986 vice president of the 675,000-member National Association of Realtors.

The election took place during the Association's 78th annual convention and trade exposition, held recently in New Orleans.

Helfant, a Realtor for 17 years and president of Helfant Realty, Inc. in Virginia Beach, is a graduate of the REALTORS® Institute, a Certified Residential Specialist and a member of the REALTORS® National Marketing Institute.

She has served on numerous National Association committees, including Community Revitalization, Political Affairs and Congressional Liaison. She also is a national director of the Association. At the state and local level, Helfant was president of the Virginia Association of REALTORS® in 1984, president of the Virginia Beach Board of REALTORS® in 1980, and was named REALTOR® of the Year by the newly formed Tidewater Board of REALTORS® in 1981.

Helfant also is active in community affairs, serving as the 1985 Chairman of the Board of Directors of the Virginia Beach Chamber of Commerce, a trustee of Humana Bayside Hospital and a director of the Bank of Virginia Beach.

She and her husband, Jack, have four children and live in Virginia Beach.

Special children care, instructional

By Lee Cahill

Not too many years ago, the children would have been in custodial care at home or in institutions with limited opportunities to improve the quality of their lives.

Now they are students at the Virginia Beach Center for Effective Learning which the parents and faculty believe is the best institution of its kind in the state. Like other students in the city, most of the Center children ride regular school buses to get them to and from school. Unlike other students, they are issued "IEP" reports instead of the conventional report cards and their ages range from two to 22.

The "IEP" stands for "individualized educational program." Each child at the Center has an educational program structured just for him or her. They are all handicapped, physically or mentally or both, and the most successful of the school's graduates are those with modest jobs.

When Congress passed Public Law 94-142 in 1975, local school districts were ordered to provide educational facilities for all handicapped children. However, Dr.

Lambdin helps Benjamin Zimmer with his walker.

John Sutherland, Center principal, said that Virginia Beach was a forerunner in special education and started its program long before that. Virginia Beach recognized its responsibility to special education at a level unheard of long before and the Center was started at its present location in 1969 at the building on Witchduck Road which originally served as the Union Kempsville High School, a pre-integration black high school.

The function of the school has changed in that the more severely handicapped children are enrolled there. Not only are school districts required to accept more severely handicapped children in the public schools, but the handicaps have become more severe, Sutherland said, because of the strides in medicine which have been successful in sustaining the life of infants who previously would have died.

The reputation of the center has grown so that many parents move to Virginia Beach just so their handicapped children will

8-year, $685,785,399 budget proposed

By Lee Cahill
City Council Reporter

City Manager Thomas H. Muehlenbeck has proposed a $572,036,828 Capital Improvement Program (CIP) for 1985-1990 and $113,748,571 for an additional three-year period, through 1993, for a total of eight-year budget of $685,785,399.

The budget, recently presented to City Council, was the third prepared by the staff in the last 12-month period. Last year's original budget of $310.4 million was revised after voters defeated a $122 million bond referendum. The interim budget contained $249.2 million in projects using some revenues from the undesignated fund balance.

The new CIP proposes increases in the use of current revenue (pay-as-you-go) financing and continuation of the general government charter bond financing programs at charter limits.

The budget assumes the passage of the $13.3 million bond referendum on Tuesday and another school bond referendum of $12.549 million in 1987 unless changes are made in the Charter bond debt ceiling. The CIP proposes spending $89.9 million in school projects over the five-year period.

Muehlenbeck recommends continuing to expand pay-as-you-go financing by the use of approximately $5 million annually from current revenues for general government capital programs. He also cautions that by doing this, the city will have to be more restrained in the operating budget.

The budget includes $89,850,799 for schools; $151,711,735 for engineering and highways; $63,282,202 for buildings; $18,571,995 for parks and recreation, and $248,619,997

Stihl officials attend U.N. dedication

Dan Kensil, vice-president of Human Resources, Stihl Incorporated, Virginia Beach, recently attended special dedication ceremonies at the United Nations in New York as a unique wood sculpture unveiled.

The distinctive sculpture, created by artist Steven Weltzman, was unveiled amid a flurry of global dignitaries and the excitement of the 40th anniversary of the United Nations. Using Stihl chain saws and hand carving tools, Weltzman created the piece for three concurrent U.N. celebrations-International Youth Year, International Year of the Forest, and the U.N.'s 40th anniversary.

Kensil, along with Ron Binkley, sales manager for Chesapeake Stihl, Stihl distributor in Baltimore, represented Stihl Incorporated at the dedication. Stihl provided chain saws and maintenance assistance to Weltzman during the project's undertaking.

"We supplied assistance throughout the creation of Weltzman's tree sculpture project," Binkley explains. "Chesapeake Stihl, in conjunction with Stihl Incorporated provided Steven with about $2,000 worth of equipment, and our service manager, Bryan Marcinko, kept all of Steven's saws in top running condition."

Weltzman spent 1,500 hours on the sculpture at a carving site donated by the Maryland Department of Parks at Seneca State Park in Gaithersburg, Maryland. Speakers at the U.N. dedication included former

Virginia's 'new image'

Political considerations aside, the election of a black and a woman to two of this state's three highest offices last week should have a positive effect on the Old Dominion's image nationwide.

Public perceptions die hard, and Virginia is still remembered for sporadic lynchings of blacks in the '20s and '30s and school desegregation battles of the late '50s and early '60s just as World War II Navy vets still remember Hampton Roads for signs that read "Sailors and dogs keep off the grass."

Those perceptions may change in light of the election of L. Douglas Wilder as Lt. Governor and Mary Sue Terry as Attorney General.—G.K.G.

U.N.'s 40th

The United Nations has recently marked its 40th anniversary.

Over the years, the U.N. has tripled in size, splintered on economics and ideology and strayed from its past affinity with the United States.

Our former Ambassador to the U.N., Jeane Kirkpatrick says that the United Nations is important because other nations regard it as important. Certainly, it is useful to have a forum where nations can meet to talk about their problems.

However, more and more, those talks have become partisan, intemperate and unhelpful. Under a system of one country, one vote, power has shifted to the Third World countries, even though the U.S. and her allies still pay the bills.

That is why public esteem for the U.N. is at an all-time low.—Paul Tribble, U.S. Senator Frivolous lawsuit

It's probably safe to say man has longed to fly ever since a caveman first looked up to see a pterodactyl or some other prehistoric forerunner of the bird winging overhead.

Unfortunately — or fortunately, if you will — avians and the upright species known today as homo sapiens have vastly different skeletal-muscular structures, and no amount of arm flapping on the part of the latter, albeit with an attached gluey mass of feathers, can overcome the difference.

Today, most of us are intelligent-enough to realize and accept the fact, but not so six men and a woman who are suing the Maharishi Mahesh Yogi on grounds he caused the irreparable physical and mental harm in a failed attempt to teach them to fly.

The suit, seeking $9 million, charges the maharishi with breach of promise, negligence and infliction of emotional distress.

The seven plaintiffs say the guru, who won fame in the '60s for counseling the Beatles, introduced a course which promised to teach them "extraordinary powers" at his Maharishi International University in Fairfield, Iowa, in 1976.

Among those "extraordinary powers" were "clairvoyance or the ability to fly."

The suit alleges that "flying in fact constituted hopping with the legs folded in the lotus position," however, a factor which has caused all seven "severe and continuing pain."

The litigation filed in a federal court in Washington, D.C., also alleges the maharishi's program "arrested and retarded the normal process of maturation and development."

That seems doubtful. The mere fact seven supposedly thinking adults — all are now in their 30s — would (a) believe they could fly in the first place and (b) willingly continue with an obviously futile and painful program to do so strongly indicated the "normal process of maturation and development" wasn't there in the first place.

It's small wonder, then, that the seven plaintiffs chose to identify themselves in the suit only as six John and one Jane Doe.

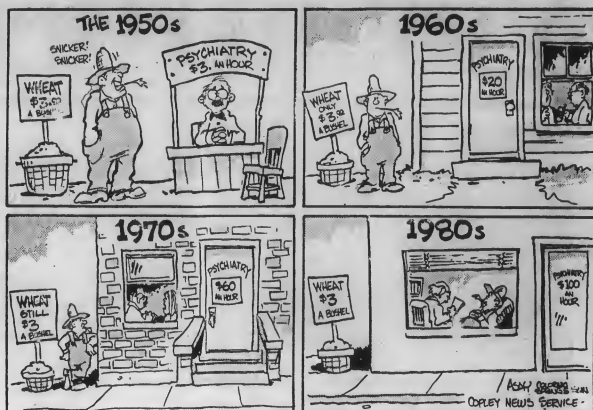

The seven probably got exactly what they deserved. But even so, it stands to reason anyone gullible enough to believe he or she might learn to fly without aircraft also would seek legal redress for his own foolhardiness.

It is not the province of courts to protect us from our own stupidity, however, even though the long lists of frivolous filings that face every court today would indicate otherwise.

Accordingly, probably the most appropriate resolution for this case would be for the judge assigned it to call attorneys for both sides to the bench and give the one who filed this flight of fancy a firm bonk on the head with the gavel.

Then, at least, the offending legal eagle would have a genuine reason to file a damage suit.

Beverage Container Deposit Bill

Editor, The Virginia Beach Sun:

Regarding a beverage container deposit bill:

There are many recyclers in the Greater Hampton Roads area anxious to recycle steel and aluminum beverage cans and all grades of paper, namely Tidewater Fibre Corporation. Many citizens know of our efforts to recycle and our advertising encourages more people to begin.

Why are "we" looking to the government for more legislation? The recycling centers are here, providing employment and tax dollars to the community, as well as a service for the environment; not to mention the income for individuals, civic organizations, and fund-raising efforts. Put the responsibility back on the citizen and businesses. Keep unnecessary government out of our lives.

More on Halley

Are you one of those frequent airline passengers who counts the miles they have traveled? Well, how about this one—Comet Halley traveled more than 35 million miles during September. That's the equivalent of 1,400 trips around the world.

But then Halley also has a long way to go—more than 200 million miles before its scheduled closest approach to the sun on Feb. 9. In the meantime, observatories around the world are gearing up to make this the most closely studied comet of all time.

To coordinate this effort, astronomers have formed the International Halley Watch (I.H.W.), a network of both professional and amateur astronomers. All observations will be sent to the I.H.W. to form a database of comet information of unprecedented detail.

Among planned studies are assessments of the spectral signatures of the chemicals that make up the comet as well as brightness and color studies to monitor its behavior, to measure its temperature and to study the dust and gases coming from its nucleus. Studies will be done in both optical and radio bands from ground based observatories, and from space.

There are now five spacecraft on the way to a rendezvous with the comet next March to make close-up measurements of Halley's properties.

Two each are being sent by Japan and the Soviet Union, and one space probe is on its way from the European Space Agency (E.S.A.).

These vehicles will be able to probe directly the material of the comet. The E.S.A. craft is targeted so close the central area of the comet that it is likely to be destroyed by the encounter.

Although the United States is not flying any space hardware by the comet, some observations will be made during a shuttle flight.

The comet is still quite faint and small, about 300 times too dim to be seen by the unaided eye. The comet is too far from the sun to have developed a tail, but a faint coma about 50,000 miles in diameter is visible. A more condensed central nucleus is about 5,000 miles in diameter. The comet's temperature was recently measured at 280 F (-123 C), and molecules of carbon, carbon monoxide and cyanogen have been observed in the comet's spectrum.

The Leander McCormick Observatory at the University of Virginia is one of many observatories obtaining photographs of the comet as part of the I.H.W. for the purpose of measuring accurate positions and updating the orbital path of Halley.

"Yukon Wild"

Beth Johnson was paddling a kayak down the Green River in Colorado when she first thought of canoeing the Yukon River. In Yukon Wild she describes the trip she and five other Texas women made during the summer of 1982, as well as the yearlong preparation for the venture.

An experienced canoeist, Beth Johnson had been on short canoe camping trips, but had never canoeed for months at a time. In order to cover the entire two thousand mile length of the Yukon River, from Whitehorse, Yukon Territory, to the Bering Sea, Johnson realized she'd have to plan an expedition of about three months. Johnson describes the process of choosing expedition members, trying to get financial help for the expedition, choosing clothes for the Arctic summer, drying enough food for six women for three months, and planning the transport of all the food, equipment, and three canoes from Texas to Canada. Her account of the preparation and the expedition is as interesting to the armchair adventurer as it is practical for someone planning a Yukon River voyage.

Johnson's journal includes both a narrative of the trip and excerpts from the journals of earlier Yukon travelers. As the group travels thirteen hundred miles by ferry through the Inland Passage from Seattle, Washington, to Skagway, Alaska, Johnson muses on John Muir's account in Travels in Alaska of his trip by steamer through the Passage. As in Muir's day, Johnson reports sighting porpoises, bald eagles, and Arctic terns from the ship.

Both Robert Service and Jack London wrote of the arduous and often fatal trip of the "stampeders" made over Dead Horse Trail in the race for the Klondike. The Texas women made the trip by train, traveling from Skagway to Whitehorse on tracks completed in 1900.

During the months of preparation for the trip, many friends advised the women to take weapons to defend themselves from grizzly bears and other dangerous animals they might encounter in the Alaskan wilderness. The women unanimously decided it was safer to go unarmed, with appropriate precautions, than to take guns. Although they saw fresh signs of bears, and even the occasional bear, they were never disturbed by bears, and they never disturbed any. The precautions were simple—no food or campfires, anything in the tents at night. Tents were pitched away from the "kitchen" area, food was packed to minimize odor, and the women not only surveyed campsites for signs of predators, but always wore small bells attached to their clothes whenever they left the campsite.

The Yukon River is still mostly wilderness, with few settlements on its length. The Texas women found that they rejoiced both in canoeing down the river for days without seeing villages or houses, and in reaching the towns, where they could pick up food and letters mailed from Texas, eat real junk food, party, and meet new people. Since they had had considerable publicity, many of the people along the river had heard of them before, and were eager to meet the group. It was not unusual for them to meet someone in a village and be invited to share a meal hundreds of miles downriver.

Much of the charm of Johnson's account lies in her honesty; she reports not only the delights of camping on the river for three months with the same people, but also the inevitable friction resulting from such close quarters. Johnson, who was accustomed to living alone, reports adjusting to never being alone.

To the envy of the canoers they met, and to their own delight, the women were able to make most of their river trip without paddling! "They" "thwarted," joining the canoes with rope, and drifted downriver. One person

LET'S TALK

By Gary Blumenstein, president, Virginia Beach Education Association

The 1985 observance of American Education Week will take place Nov. 17 through 23.

The first observance took place in 1921 after World War I draft boards discovered about 25% of the draftees were illiterate and about 29% were physically unfit. An educational campaign to correct these deficiencies was conducted by the American Legion, the National Education Association and the U.S. Office of Education (now the U.S. Department of Education). This led to the first annual nationwide salute to public education.

Since then, the three original sponsors have been joined by the National Congress of Parents and Teachers and the National School Boards Association. The observance now serves to increase public understanding and appreciation of the schools, to encourage parents to visit the schools, to secure civic and community support to improve the schools, and to help students gain an appreciation of what the schools are doing for them.

Good marks

According to recent national and statewide polls, Americans give the public schools good marks. Despite the criticisms often heard, the success of the American public school system has earned the public's favor.

Through the doors of our public schools pass Americans, and future Americans, of all races, creeds and nationalities. All are provided an equal opportunity to learn to read, write, compute and develop their abilities and interests. Education has made the 'American dream' a real possibility for all our children.

The improvement of public education in Virginia has garnered the attention of the citizens. After many years of neglect and underfunding, public education has become a number one priority. A renewed commitment to educational excellence on the part of both public officials and everyday citizens has resulted in positive advancements in Virginia.

We have seen enacted tougher graduation standards, curriculum improvements, special programs for the gifted and the handicapped, improved salaries for teachers and a real commitment to adequately fund the state mandated Standards of Quality.

Parents are establishing closer ties to local schools through active PTA involvement and volunteer programs. Business leaders, needing educated workers for new technologies and worldwide markets, are becoming more involved in education through such programs as Adopt-A-School. With this type of community involvement and governmental support, excellence in our schools will become more than just another reform movement.

Spot Light

As professional educators, we are encouraged and excited by the spotlight on our public schools. We are proud of our accomplishments and of the achievements of our students. During American Education Week, we encourage citizens to visit the schools and see first-hand, in action, the complicated, yet rewarding, process that is education.

We encourage you to attend an open house, a dramatic performance, a musical program or a sports event at your local school and witness for yourself the successes of public education. It is our commitment to educational excellence today which will build a brighter tomorrow for us all.

Salute American public schools where the Subject is Excellence!

Center for Effective Learning

have the benefit of the center's program.

The P.T.A. president, Anna Barker, is one of these. She and her husband, James, a Norfolk firefighter, moved to Virginia Beach to enroll their sons, eight and five years old. Both boys have a form of cerebral palsy. Barker said that they knew of the quality of the program and the staff at the Center and overlooked the physical building, the peeling paint and the cracked plaster.

Bond Success

The success of the school bond issue last Tuesday meant a lot to Barker and other parents like her. Six million dollars of the issue will be used to build three satellite buildings in connection with other schools to replace the Center. The new facilities will be a great improvement, she said. The present school was not designed for the handicapped and has no railings on the walls for support and small rooms which do not accommodate wheel chairs.

The School Board has employed a consultant for the buildings and this week expects to advertise for proposals from architects.

The addition at Pembroke Elementary School will house the multi-handicapped; the Newtown Road Elementary School addition will house the trainable elementary school students, and the Princess Anne High School addition will house the older trainable students.

The facilities will remove the Center's students from isolation at the Center and place them in situations where they will have more opportunity for interaction with other students.

The Center has approximately 230 students. Twenty-eight children are enrolled in the four pre-school classes which have a session from 9 a.m. to noon. The remaining students have a full day, from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. The enrollment includes 112 severely and profoundly handicapped and two autistic youngsters.

Support for the program comes from Federal, State and local funds. It is costly. Compared to the approximate $2,800 per pupil cost for other students, the cost of the multi-handicapped program comes to $8,243, and for the trainable program, $5,518 for elementary students and $6,385 for secondary students.

Sutherland points out that the law requires that the children be served in the least restrictive environment which is something the satellite schools will accomplish.

He said the rationale is that children can no longer be warehoused and should receive an education which is appropriate to that received by their peers. If that is not possible, then the next level must be provided.

He said that the trend now longer is to build single facilities, and the Virginia Beach satellites will be part of the regular schools with common thresholds.

Sutherland has been principal of the school since 1979. Last year he served on the faculty of the College of William and Mary. He also taught at the Center from 1972-74. Sutherland, an apparently enthusiastic and dedicated educator, received his undergraduate degree from Old Sander Schaulflege, a teacher's aid and school bus driver, helps 20-year-old Campbell Hodgson on to the bus using a hydraulic lift.

Dominion University, took graduate studies at William and Mary, and received his doctorate in special education from Pennsylvania State University.

The professional staff includes 30 teachers, three occupational therapists, three physical therapists, three speech therapists and specialized teachers in physical education, art, music and industrial arts.

A full-time nurse is assigned to the school.

Some of the children need to be fed through tubes and the school has a high rate of seizures. The problems are handled adequately, Sutherland said. But the children are more fragile than others, and "we lose some over the year," Sutherland said.

Special Equipment Buses with hydraulic lifts are provided to transport the students. One child who can't control bodily heat, has to be transported in an air-conditioned and climate-controlled station wagon.

The law also provides that the school districts provide adequate transportation.

Sutherland said that the school is unusual in that it contains medical disciplines. A certified physical therapist is unusual, he said.

Volunteers from the community furnish considerable help. The Naval Weapons School at Dam Neck has adopted the school and has helped modify equipment.

One of the "big things" at the school is toilet training. The Naval group devised switches to alert the staff when a child has used the bathroom. A bell signals the staff to praise the youngster.

The Kiwanis Club, which recently adopted the Center, as a major project, gave the center $2,200 and plans a field day in the spring so that kids can participate.

The Virginia Beach Jaycees have sponsored a talent show, the Sunshine Review, and the P.T.A. is strong.

Sutherland said that at the present facility, the rooms are too small for the changing tables and the wheel chairs, the lighting is inadequate, and running water and toilets are not provided in the classrooms.

Sutherland concedes that the number of children who will benefit from the interaction with the mainstream school population will vary. Some will profit immensely, he said, as will the people in the school in that they will learn how to understand the problems of the handicapped. Some of the activities which can be shared by some are physical education, games, lunch and library.

The law requires that the children be served from age two to 21, but those who reach 22 after Sept. 30 are permitted to remain.

The graduation is mostly ceremonial. That time comes when the center has done all it can for the students.

Some will not be independent, ever, Sutherland said. Others will live in group homes or a supervised apartment. A number of students who left the center are in sheltered employment. The School works with the Career Development Center next door to prepare students for jobs.

One student got a job in construction, others work in places like Pancakes and Pickles and the Pizza Hut. When first approached, one establishment said no, Sutherland said, because they did not want to train the individual. The Center proposed that a Center staff member be taught first and the staff member would teach the student the job and supervise for a period. That idea went over. Now, one person on the staff and two others on a grant from Virginia Commonwealth University become the on-the-job trainers for local businesses.

Winding up with an adequate income at retirement time is not only a matter of having acquired capital during productive years, but also, it is a matter of having prudently conserved a portion of it for later use.

The question naturally arises as to how to proceed. This column, and a subsequent one, will discuss the two most important aspects of financial planning—Getting Organized and Setting Realistic Goals.

At first glance, total personal financial planning can seem to be an overwhelming task. Minimizing taxes, balancing your

Financial planning - getting started investments, carrying enough insurance, planning your estate—where do you start?

A better way is to look at financial planning as a series of steps which, when added together, make up a complete financial plan. And the first step in accomplishing any form of financial planning is getting organized.

Getting organized logically starts by accurately tracking your cash flow so that you know where your money is going. Once you track your cash flow, you can create a budget that will allow you to control your cash flow more accurately.

Here is one simple way to do it: For a month, keep accurate records of all of your expenses.

Some expenses, like your mortgage payment or utility bill, will be easy to track since they show up on your monthly checking account statement and can add up to very large amounts in an amazingly short period of time. It's the occasional or impulsive purchases that are hard to track. So you might want to carry a 3" by 5" card in your wallet or purse in order to note all expenses over fifty cents. Next, organize these expenses into different spending categories, e.g., food, clothing, shelter, entertainment, savings, insurance, taxes. At the end of each week, transfer your cash expenses from the card to a weekly expense worksheet.

At the end of the month, add up the weeks' expenses. After you see where your money goes, you can now determine how much income you have for spending or investing. You can now determine if spending in certain categories can be reduced or modified to increase your discretionary cash flow.

Your next step toward a financial plan is preparing a personal balance sheet. On it you list your cash reserves, investments, personal property, liabilities, debt; in short, anything you own, and anything you owe to anyone.

Once you get your finances organized, you can then begin setting your financial goals. These could be such things as investing to meet a specific retirement goal, providing for a child's education, or minimizing taxes. Next Week: Step Two - Setting Goals.

Where to live?

Choosing the right area

Choosing a neighborhood—the immediate area around your home—is a very important part of any homebuying decision, says Art Zachary, General Manager of Womble Realty.

The neighborhood in which you live is one of the vital factors involved in helping to determine the value of your home, Zachary says. "In addition, the neighborhood must be conducive to your lifestyle needs. As a result, you should not neglect this crucial element in a home purchase," he adds.

Zachary points out that important items are often overlooked such as the resident's lifestyles, the neighborhood's overall appearance, and the location of neighborhood services.

"By observing neighborhoods and talking to area residents, postal carriers and those realtors adding you in your home search, you can determine which neighborhoods attract families with children as well as couples without children or singles," advises Zachary. "If you have children, you will especially want to determine the ages of other children in the neighborhood, he adds.

Determining lifestyles and professional backgrounds of neighbors are other key factors to carefully consider when choosing a neighborhood, Zachary advises. "Such information generally is available from realtors who more than likely were involved in selling homes to your neighbors, he says.

In addition, pay close attention to residential and any nearby commercial property maintenance, landscaping and general upkeep as this will provide evidence to the area's usual appearance. How much do the neighbor's care for lawns and gardens? Are the houses maintained "like new," adequately, or poorly?

Another key element to consider when choosing a neighborhood is the convenience to shopping areas, schools, recreational facilities, city and public services and other such amenities, Zachary adds.

"The sculpture is a product of an idea I have had for a number of years—to do a sculpture of children of all nations, working together in harmony," Weltman said. He took his idea to the American Forestry Association (AFA) in Washington, D.C. The AFA agreed to serve as a sponsor and put him in touch with U.N. officials.

"This sculpture also represents one man's dream—my dream," Weltman told the dedication audience on the North Lawn of the U.N. grounds. "If you have something to share, do it, pursue your dreams!"

After its three-week display at the United Nations, the sculpture will be transported to its permanent exhibition site in Montgomery County, Maryland.

Naval Air Station Oceana sailor of the quarter likes busy schedule

One-by-one, candidates for the sailor of the quarter title are interviewed during a selection process conducted by a six-member panel of chief petty officers representing Naval Air Station (NAS) Oceana departments.

Candidates are scored on their responses to questions pertaining to the Navy and their professional expertise. Considered the best of five candidates by the panel, Air Traffic Controller Airman (ACAN) Paul Walsh emerged as the NAS Oceana Sailor of the Quarter for October, November and December.

In the Navy just over two years, the 28-year-old Troy, Michigan native was influenced by a pilot friend to pursue his dream of becoming an air traffic controller through the military. After checking his options, and perhaps influenced by the fact that his brother was former Navy, Walsh joined the Navy for both training and travel.

After recruit training in Orlando, Florida and schooling in Memphis, Tennessee for air traffic controller, Walsh requested assignment to a busy airport. "The job is definitely a challenge—I love it!" says Walsh of his assignment to NAS Oceana. "Every day is different," he adds.

As a member of the Air Operations Department, AN Walsh first applied his schooling in the "Blue Room" which is a darkened room filled with radar equipment to monitor inbound and outbound aircraft on scopes. Training, practical application of training, and more training, are ongoing until an air controller is fully qualified to handle aircraft traffic via instrument or visual monitoring. Walsh has progressed from the "Blue Room" to duties in the control tower where he has become departure, clearance and precision approach qualified.

While Walsh did get his wish to work at a busy airport, he still manages to find time to relax. A self-taught musician, Walsh plays acoustic and electric guitars and enjoys writing songs, especially ballads. He likes the Virginia Beach area and the change from Michigan's lakes to the Atlantic Ocean. Although he enjoys skiing, Walsh has not complained about the "sacrifice" of long Michigan winters for the extended Southern summers.

As Sailor of the Quarter, ACAN Walsh received a station plaque, a $50 savings bond donated by Sovran Bank, two tickets to Busch Gardens, dinner for two at Red Lobster, and a private luncheon with Captain L. F. Norton, Commanding Officer, Naval Air Station Oceana, the Command Master Chief, Aviation Aircraft Maintenancemen Lawrence Ervin and four guests of his choosing at the Voyager Enlisted Club.

New commander at Fort Story

Colonel Paul H. Yearout, who has been serving as Director of Combat Developments, United States Army Transportation and Aviation Logistics School, Fort Eustis, Virginia, has taken command of Fort Story during a recent Change of Command Ceremonies.

Fort Story is the "Home of the Army Amphibians" and air-cushioned vehicles. It is the Army's Center for Logistics-Over-The-Shore (LOTS) training and the site for testing of new equipment, doctrine and concepts by the Army, Navy, and Marines.

Yearout succeeds Colonel Joseph G. Farrell, who has been serving as Commander since Nov. 16, 1984. Colonel Farrell's Army assignments have included, Commanding Officer, 206th Amphibious Truck Company, Fort Story, Virginia; Commanding Officer, 124th Terminal Service Company, Commanding Officer, United States Army Transportation Center and Fort Eustis Noncommissioned Officer Academy, Fort Eustis, Virginia; Commanding Officer, 124th Truck Battalion (CBT), Vietnam and Commanding Officer Military Traffic Management Command Transportation Engineering Agency, Newport News, Virginia.

Yearout

Air Traffic Controller Airman (ACAN) Paul Walsh, station Sailor of the Quarter, enjoys the hectic pace of his job as an air traffic controller for the busy NAS Oceana master jet base.

City budget

for public utilities.

Financing will come from general appropriations, $75,288,372; general obligation bonds, $171,564,368; 1983 school bonds, $113,3 million; future school referendum bonds, $12,549,000 and 1980 highway referendum bonds, $1,137,289.

Also, for water and sewer-1977 referendum bonds, $1,268,880; 1980 referendum bonds; $31,089,464; future referendum bonds, $165,955,000; future revenue bonds, $20 million.

Funds from bond issues total $416,864,001. Revenue Sharing, through 1987, comes to $28,485,345.

Federal, state and private contributions total $28,404,000, and other sources of funding total $51,399,110.

The school program includes seven additional schools with a design/program capacity for 8,990 children who are expected to be added to the system, an 11 percent increase in the total number of schools—five elementary, one junior high and one senior high.

The program also includes the Center of Effective Learning, the renovation of Princess Anne High School and the air conditioning of all schools which are not now air conditioned.

The CIP proposes financing the top 15 highways and engineering projects for $151.7 million over the five years. However, 88 new projects were identified at a total five-year cost of $354.3 million.

Included in the CIP are 113 lane miles of new/improved major collector and arterial roads throughout the city with an additional 36 lane miles programmed for the years 1991-1993; the completion of the Princess Anne/Kempsville Road interchange; replacement of the Pungo Ferry Bridge and construction of a new off-ramp/flyover at Independence Boulevard to be financed from toll road revenues.

No referendum for road projects is proposed. Funding is proposed through a combination of revenue sharing, pay-as-you-go allocations and charter bonds.

The plan includes the initiation or completion of 7.7 miles of free-standing bikeways as well as bikeways on four street projects, totaling 5.9 miles of bike lanes. All are to be financed on a pay-as-you-go basis.

The CIP includes $9,631,764 for the Resort Area Revitalization program although the Resort Area Commission has requested projects totalling $82,480,516. Other funding plans are being considered including participation by the private sector and the creation of a special taxing district. In the original five-year budget last year, the city had allocated $13,484,194 to the project. However the allocation was cut to $5,066,000 when the bond referendum was defeated. Funds for the project, not included in the bond referendum, were transferred to bond projects.

Buildings in the plan include the relocation of the new Juvenile and Domestic Relations Court building, the construction of a new combined District and Circuit Court Building and five fire stations.

The five-year period should see the completion of 218 acres of new major parks, the completion of the estimated 90,000 square-foot Great Neck Recreation Center, and the completion of the 117-acre expansion of Red Wing Golf Course.

The utilities budget is dominated by Lake Gaston, the city's water source project for which a bond referendum of $165,955,000 is anticipated.

City sets public hearing on Monday, Nov. 18 at 2 p.m. in City Council Chambers in the Municipal Center.

An earlier hearing was recently held on the Capital Improvement Program.

Council ponders

How to keep tax money and bc

By Lee Cahill
City Council Reporter

City Council is reviewing its personal property tax on boats in an effort to have more Virginia Beach boat owners register their boats in Virginia Beach and perhaps attract boats from elsewhere.

Boat interests maintain that taxes, or the lack of them, in states like Florida, Delaware and Maryland cause Virginia Beach boat owners to register their boats in those states to avoid the high personal property taxes here.

Also, cities closer to home have lowered their taxes enough to lure Virginia Beach boat owners.

The City of Portsmouth has approved the reduction of the personal property tax rate on boats to 50 cents per $100 of assessed valuation effective Jan. 1, 1986. In fact, said Jim Byrum, president of Virginia Yacht Sales, Portsmouth is running ads in leading boating magazines announcing its low tax rates.

Hampton, also, is charging 49 cents per $100 valuation.

In Virginia Beach, the tax is six dollars per $100 based on a 50 percent assessment or $3 per $100 true value.

Local boat owners appealed to Council at its last meeting to lower its tax rate to a more equitable amount.

Byrum said that $25 to $30 million worth of new and used boats are sold each year in the city and that less than 20 percent are registered in Virginia Beach. He said that the boating industry is not a small industry any longer and that the city was not getting a fair share of the taxes. And when boaters go to Hatteras or Florida to register their boats, they tend to stay in those places longer, denying Virginia Beach income from related industries as well.

George Langley, representing Boat Owners of Tidewater - Virginia Beach, said that boaters of Virginia Beach recommend a tax on boat lengths and believe that if the tax rate is reasonable

Citizens and police officers commended

The City of Virginia Beach Police Department will be presenting special commendations to three private citizens and three police officers in an awards ceremony on Wednesday, Nov. 27.

The ceremony will take place at 10 a.m. in room G-32 of the Municipal Center's Public Safety Building, and will honor the following individuals for their efforts in crime prevention:

Eric and Craig Andrews, who recently responded to the screams of a neighbor and averted an attempted rape. After frightening the attacker away, the brothers chased him for a distance and later provided the police with information leading to the suspect's apprehension.

Robert H. Cotton, Jr., branch manager of the First American Bank at Kellam Road and Virginia Beach Boulevard. His quick thinking and presence of mind during an attempted bank robbery in May enabled the police to apprehend the robber without incident.

Officer Charles L. Bush, who is being recognized for going above and beyond the call of duty in providing assistance to those in need. Officer Bush's caring attitude as well as professional demeanor have been cited for this award.

Communications Officer V. Jourigan, who handled an incoming telephone call from a gunshot victim being held hostage and kept him on the line long enough to send police help. Officer Jourigan's composure and her compassion during this recognized incident are being recognized by this award.

Lieutenant Ernest E. Rorser, who heeded a cry for help at a Norfolk YMCA and apprehended a child molester. Lieutenant Rorser's quick response to the situation ensured that the sexual assault was less severe than it might have been and prevented the suspect's escape.

Special recognition will also be extended to Officers D. Q. Scott and John Helton on their retirement from the Police Department.

Beach girls shine on Longwood team

Traci Strickland, Claye Conkwright, Theresa Labyak, Michelle Krolikowski, Keith Brooks and Shelly Bowden, all Virginia Beach natives have competed on the Longwood College women's field hockey team this past fall.

The Longwood team has a record of 11-4, its best since 1975. Strickland, a sophomore, plays at the wing position for the Lady Lancers. She is Longwood's third leading scorer this year with six goals. She also recorded 96 shots on goal for the season. She is majoring in foreign language. Traci was an honor graduate of Bayside High School where she competed in hockey, basketball, track and softball. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Strickland of Virginia Beach.

Conkwright, a sophomore, plays at the midfield position for Longwood. She has been named defensive player of the game many times this past season. She recorded 182 interceptions as a defensive player with eight defensive saves. She also had 34 shots on goal. Claye was active in hockey, soccer, track and cross-country at Frank W. Cox High School. Majoring in earth science, she is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Douglas D. Conkwright of Virginia Beach.

Bowden, also a freshman, plays at the midfield position for the Lady Lancers. She is a graduate of Princess Anne High School and is majoring in physical education. Shelly is the daughter of Ms. Judith Bowden of Virginia Beach.

Tidewater artists hold juried show

The Tidewater Artists Association's 32nd Annual Juried Exhibition will be on view from Friday, Dec. 6, to Sunday, Jan. 5, in the Virginia Beach Arts Center's main galleries. An opening reception is set for Thursday evening, Dec. 5 from 7 to 9 p.m.

The T.A.A. Annual Exhibition is coordinated in cooperation with the Arts Center.

Last year, work by 35 area artists was selected to exhibit. This year's show chairman, Norfolk artist Pamela Lassiter, this year expects compelling and successful show.

"There is always new and experimental work each year...and there are a lot of expressionistic paintings coming out now," Lassiter said.

The T.A.A. membership continues to expand regionally, including cities as far as Newport News, Richmond and Elizabeth City, NC. Such expansion always brings in a new crop of artwork each year, Lassiter believes.

Jurors for the T.A.A. Annual Exhibition are Elizabeth King, assistant professor of art at Virginia Commonwealth University in Richmond, and Roger Clisby, chief curator and deputy director of The Chrysler Museum. King received her B.F.A. and M.F.A. from the San Francisco Art Institute and has taught at the University of Southern California at Berkeley and the College of William and Mary in VA. Clisby received his M.F.A. in art history from Pennsylvania State University, and served as chief curator at the Crocker Art Museum in Sacramento, CA for 14 years prior to coming to Norfolk.

The T.A.A. promotes the development of visual arts in the Tidewater area. It is an association of artists and patrons who sponsor workshops, lectures and exhibitions. As usual, the T.A.A. Exhibition is free and open to the public, with refreshments and a cash bar. For further information, contact the Virginia Beach Arts Center at 425-0000.

Wanted: A few heroes

Where have you gone, Joe DiMaggio?

—Simon and Garfunkle

We seem to be in need of heroes.

We don't remember when heroes went out of style in America, but they seem to be in short supply these days.

Our politicians, even the "clean" ones, have been stripped of their heroic raiments by the time they reach national office.

None of our big-name entertainers these days even want to be heroes.

And our top professional athletes, besides being grossly overpaid, have almost to a man been revealed as junkies, drunks or perverts.

Anti-heroes are big in rock music and to a certain extent movies. But anti-heroes don't do much to bring the nation together.

When "The Duke" died, a lot of people hoped Ronald Reagan might take over as a national hero.

Some of the right stuff was in place, despite Bedtime for Bonzo and other grade B credits, but the Old Cowboy has had his troubles trying to fight such formidable foes as Congress and the National Debt.

And we Americans have always liked our heroes to be winners.

We recently discussed the feeling that all of our American heroes had died or were in hiding, with a visitor from another country.

He opined that the heroes were still there, but that we've become too hard on them.

The intense rivalry between television news, national magazines and newspapers, he said, has placed those of heroic qualities under such intense scrutiny that their little secrets, foibles and Achilles heels are known to all.

None of our "old-time" heroes would have been able to survive similar scrutiny, he added.

"You Americans tear your heroes down," he said.

There may be some truth to this.

Even Thomas Jefferson, who staunchly defended the First Amendment prior to assuming the presidency, had some dark thoughts about freedom of the press after serving four years in office.

And he didn't have the Network news, 60 Minutes, People magazine, the National Enquirer or today's squadrons of local news hounds with which to contend.

Perhaps we should have a system to certify budding heroes and allow them to stow a few dark secrets, black sheep and a skeleton or two in some sort of blind trust along with stocks, bonds and other potential conflicts of interest.

Then we'd have some heroes again.

But could we trust them?

American trouble spots

Our nation has experienced a period of vigorous economic growth, more Americans are employed than at anytime in our history, and inflation has been virtually eliminated. Still problems remain for many of our citizens.

Too many Americans are unemployed. Too many of our children live in poverty. Too many of our citizens are victims of violent crimes. Our nation's educational achievement is not what it ought to be. Here lies our challenge in the days ahead.

What are some of the things we should do together? We can fight for jobs in America by demanding that international trade be free and fair. Let us demand the opportunity to sell our goods overseas—our high technology, textiles, tobacco and coal—just as other countries have the right to sell their products here.

Tax reform should reduce the tax burden on the poor. No group today pays a higher percentage of their income in taxes, and this burden discourages work.

A family that earns $10,600—that is the official poverty level—must pay over $1,000 in federal income and Social Security taxes. What this means is that people near the poverty line are being taxed into poverty. That is unfair and we need to do something about it.

We can improve job training. We have replaced leaf-raking with skill-making in federal programs, so that now more than half of all trainees find permanent jobs in the private sector. But we need to do more.

We need to improve housing by giving tenants of public housing a greater role in managing their homes and a chance to buy them. In test cases, we have seen that when this occurs, there is a dramatic drop in drugs, vandalism, crime and vacancies. Why not give people the opportunity to shape their own lives?—Paul Tribble, U.S. Senator.

Delegate says "no pass, no play" rule may be introduced

Editor:

I recently attended the Southern Regional Education Board's Thirty-Fourth Annual Legislative Work Conference in Austin, Texas. One of the topics of this conference was the Texan "No Pass, No Play" rule which is enforced in the Texan public school system.

In essence, this rule states that students must receive a passing grade in all of their academic classes to be able to participate in extracurricular activities.

I am contemplating introducing legislation in Virginia similar to this legislation which is now law in Texas. Whether or not I initiate this new policy myself, there is a great possibility that it will be introduced into the Virginia General Assembly this year. Since I am also an educator, I am aware of the immense statewide implications of this policy; therefore, I would like you to carefully consider the pros and cons and develop a position on the following:

"A student, enrolled in a school district in this state shall be suspended from participation in any extracurricular activity sponsored or sanctioned by the school district during the grade reporting period after a grade reporting period in which the student received a grade lower than the equivalent of 70 on a scale of 100 in any academic class."

In brief, this is the Texan "No Pass, No Play" rule.

As an educator, I am always seeking to improve our school system. Any input from the public would be extremely helpful. I would appreciate hearing comments, pro or con, on this issue. Please send them to: J. W. "Billy" O'Brien, Jr., 4661 Haygood Road, Suite 107, Virginia Beach, VA 23455.

These two diagrams show the locations of Halley's comet and the Earth for their closest approaches in 1910 and 1986. The comet was closest to the sun on April 20, 1910 and will be again on Feb. 9, 1986. For the 1986 passage the Earth will be on the opposite side of the solar system, so we will not be able to see the comet at that time at all. In 1910 the comet was closest to the Earth on May 18 at a distance of about 15 million miles. In 1986 we will never be that close to the comet, and when we are at the closest point (about 39 million miles away), the comet will already be decreasing in size because it will be so far from the sun then.

"Halley's" 85-86 show less spectacular

In 1910, Halley's comet, glowing brighter than the Northern Star with a tail sweeping half way across the sky, caused quite a stir. Doom and disaster were predicted, causing near panic in some areas.

However, at the University of Virginia's Leander J. McCormick Observatory, the comet didn't cause that much excitement. No records of observations of the comet exist, and even though the observatory had photographing capabilities, no photographs exist from 1910.

The situation is reversed this year. Despite the fact that Halley's comet will not create anywhere near the spectacular show it did in 1910, the University's Observatory has already started tracking the comet.

On its way sunward, Halley's comet is getting brighter to Earth observers. Visual estimates at the end of October are that the comet is about 20 times brighter than it was at the start of the month. On Nov. 27, 1985, the comet will be closest to the Earth on its inward journey to the sun. It will be about 57.5 million miles away.

However, it still remains about 30 times too faint to be seen with the unaided eye. Both professional and amateur astronomers have now reported seeing the comet in small telescopes and binoculars, although it is just barely visible, and only at good observing sites.

Photographs with larger telescopes show the coma stretching out into a short tail and several small jets of material extending out from the nucleus. The size of the visible coma is now almost 100,000 miles in diameter.

Traveling toward the sun at its 15 miles per second rate, which is about 53,000 miles per hour, the comet moved about 39 million miles closer during October, so that on Nov. 1 it was only 178.4 million miles from the sun and 99.4 million miles from the Earth.

Even at the best time to view the comet from this area (next March) it will be very faint and much less spectacular than in 1910. At that time the Earth even passed through the comet's tail at a distance of 18 million miles from Halley's nucleus with, despite dire predictions, no noticeable effects. Next April at closest approach, we will be more than twice as far away as the counter in 1910 due to the orbit in which the Earth will be moving as the comet passes.

Saving Bay goal of plan

The Virginia Forum, a consumer oriented environmental educational organization, has released the following commentary by Charles Fox and Velma Smith. Fox is director of the Chesapeake Bay Project at the Environmental Policy Institute in Washington. Smith, a Falls Church resident, is a Virginia conservationist.

This fall Charles S. Robb joined other Bay-area governors in announcing the Chesapeake Bay Restoration and Protection Plan. Although not a "plan" in the sense of detailing future actions, the document describes an impressive host of new programs to help save the Chesapeake Bay.

Conspicuously lacking, however, are specific strategies to implement and finance nutrient controls at sewage treatment plants. This is unfortunate, as excessive nutrients are one of the most important factors in the devastating and costly decline of the Chesapeake Bay.

The nation's largest estuary represents billions of dollars and thousands of jobs to the Old Dominion. An estimated 500,000 sport fishermen use Virginia's Chesapeake Bay waters.

Signs of trouble for this great resource have been evident for many years in the form of

Books

By Mary K. Chelton

Book teaches art of arguing

If, like me, you have ever had one of those maddening conversations where you are convinced that you've been either subtly insulted or actually bested in an argument, The Gentle Art of Verbal Self-Defense by Suzette Hagin Elgin (Prentice-Hall, 1980) is a very enlightening book.

Elgin, a noted psychologist and science fiction author, actually conducts workshops in verbal self-defense. She calls her book a manual of "verbal judo," which is based on four deceptively simple principles: 1) Know that you are under attack. 2) Know what kind of attack you are facing. 3) Know how to make your defense fit the attack. 4) Know how to follow through.

Examples with scripts are then given of the five verbal assault modes: the blamer, the placater, the computer, the distracter, and the leveler. The placater, for example, is afraid that other people don't like or will abandon her, and says things like, "Oh, nothing bothers me. Do what you like," whereas a blamer says, "Do you always have to put yourself first?"

The computer mode is the most fun, though, because the person really does sound like a recording. "It is obvious that no real difficulty exists here." The distracter is the most difficult to characterize because she will verbalize a chaotic mix of anything just to fill the void. The leveler says exactly what she feels and is a problem only when she's a phony. Elgin gives a wonderful example of these five trapped in an elevator:

Placater: Oh, I hope I didn't do anything to cause this. I sure didn't mean to!

Blamer: Which one of you idiots was fooling around with the buttons?

Computer: There is undoubtedly some perfectly simple reason why this elevator isn't moving. Certainly there is no cause whatever for alarm.

Distracter: Did one of you hit the stop button? Oh, I didn't mean that; of course none of you would do anything like that! It is, however, extremely easy to do that sort of thing by accident. Why do things like this happen only to me?

Leveler: Personally, I'm scared.

Except for the leveler, there is usually no interplay between words and feelings, and nearly everyone prefers one of these modes under stress, but Elgin's point is that we are not confined to them and can deliberately choose to alter verbal behavior as needed, especially when others use a particular mode against us.

The rest of the book describes common verbal exchanges, identifies the attack mode, and then presents revised scripts to give examples of how the person being attacked can deliberately deflect the assault, and in some cases, counterattack. Choosing an appropriate reply depends not only on identifying the verbal mode but also its presupposition of control over a situation. Presuppositions are usually expressed in phrases beginning with any of the following: If you really..., "even you should...", "Why don't you ever...", "Everybody understands why you...", "A person who...", "Some X's would...", "Don't you even care..."

One of the funniest examples Elgin gives of deflecting a presupposition assault is the following:

Man: If you really loved me, you wouldn't waste so much money.

Woman: You know, it's interesting that so many men have this feeling that their wives don't love them.

The idea behind this exchange is that one responds to the presupposition of his claiming not to be loved, rather than the bait of wasting money. A counterattack, rather than a deflection, would be:

Woman: You know, it's interesting that so many men—once they reach your age—begin to feel

Aides honored for dedication

LET'S TALK

By Gary Blumenstein, president, Virginia Beach Education Association

Teacher aides receive special recognition from the Virginia Beach Education Association during American Education Week because they are very special people when it comes to teachers and students. Teacher aides have become an integral part of the instructional program in Virginia Beach and contribute immeasurably to students and teachers alike.

The school system first started using teacher aids in the early '70s. Since that time programs have developed and evolved until today over 400 teacher aides are used throughout the school system.

Teacher aides are used extensively in special education and kindergarten. The elementary physical education program has teacher aides working with physical education teachers on a daily basis. The reading and Chapter I programs use teacher aides to provide individual and small group help to hundreds of children. Teacher aides work with teachers in the various grade levels to have more and better instructional aids and materials. No matter where you look, the efforts, talents, dedication and love of teacher aides for children shines through.

It was not until VBEA instituted a Teacher Aide of the Year award program that I was able to understand the collective benefits of teacher aides in the Virginia Beach City Public Schools. When the nomination forms poured in and I did the extra special things teacher aides do for our schools and children, I began to realize how impressive the accomplishments of teacher aides really are.

These accomplishments go well beyond their assigned responsibilities. For example, one aide prepares end-of-the-year attendance certificates in calligraphy for all students with perfect attendance. She also maintains an "open classroom" for students and teachers to utilize materials (arts and crafts, pictures, bulletin boards, games, manipulatives) on a 'sign out' basis. This same aide creates decorative signs, posters and wall hangings for various areas in the school and furnishes plants and greenery for various school locations throughout the year. Multiply this aide's contributions by 400 and you can begin to see the value of teacher aides to the schools in Virginia Beach.

One aide hand crochets tree ornaments for every child she works with and she touches the lives of over 100 children each year. One aide helps write plays for the Music Department twice each year, then helps design and make costumes and stage decorations. She attends rehearsals and even helps direct the productions. The list of extra special deeds of teacher aides goes on and on.

American Education Week is an important time to celebrate the contribution of public schools to our country, and in Virginia Beach, it is an important time to give recognition to teacher aides who do so very much for our public schools.

declining harvests of shellfish and many species of finfish, growing turbidity of the water, disappearance of submerged grasses, and the closure of areas to harvest because of the presence of dangerous pollutants.

Much of this decline is caused by over-enrichment of the Bay by nutrients--nitrogen and phosphorus from farm fields, sewage treatment plants, over-fertilized lawns and failing septic tanks. These nutrients stimulate massive algae growth in the Bay and its tributaries. When the algae die they consume oxygen--stealing it from other organisms such as finfish, shellfish and various plants which need it to survive.

For two of the last three years the problem has been dramatically highlighted when the nutrient-enriched Potomac River experienced giant algae "blooms", leaving area residents with a green, smelly, algae-choked waterway during much of the summer.

Roughly half of the Bay's nutrients come from farm and urban runoff. Sewage plants contribute the rest. Thus, controlling nutrient input from sewage plants is an essential part of an effective Bay cleanup.

The Commonwealth has established a "tentative" goal of:

- Reducing phosphorus entering the Bay by 20 percent below 1980 levels, and
- Maintaining nitrogen input at the 1980 levels.

The two goals apply to nutrients flowing into the Bay via the James, Rappahannock and York Rivers, which are under the sole jurisdiction of the Old Dominion. These and other major rivers in the Bay area are the main conduits for nitrogen and phosphorus reaching the Bay.

Instead of a decrease during the period 1980 to 1983, annual phosphorus flow in the James, control has historically been expensive, new techniques being tested in the Bay area offer great hope for cheaper alternatives. For example, the Hampton Roads Sanitation District is developing a treatment plant that will remove both nitrogen and phosphorus for only five percent more than conventional sewage Rappahannock and York increased by 370,000 pounds, or 13 percent. Virtually all of this increase came from sewage treatment plants. Meanwhile, the amount of nitrogen in these river basins increased by 1.5 million pounds, or 11 percent. Again, sewage plants were responsible for most of this increase.

Given current trends, annual phosphorus and nitrogen input from sewage treatment plants in the year 2000 will be 36 and 25 percent, respectively, above 1983 levels.

Clearly, the "tentative" goals are not working. Few sewage treatment plants have nutrient controls in place. The Commonwealth still does not have any statewide nutrient standards for sewage treatment plants, and formal river basin reduction goals are nonexistent.

Fortunately, we know that once effective goals and standards are established, nutrient control measures to reduce both nitrogen and phosphorus can be implemented, albeit at significant cost.

Given the complex nature of the Bay ecosystem, phosphorus controls are usually required at treatment plants in the more freshwater portions of the rivers, while either nitrogen or phosphorus controls--or both--may be needed in the saltier areas.

Both phosphorus and nitrogen control technologies are well established, and though nitrogen treatments.

A ban on phosphate-containing detergents can also be an effective part of a nutrient control strategy. Phosphate detergents contribute up to 30 percent of the phosphorus being discharged from a sewage treatment plant. Effective non-phosphate detergents have been developed and widely used for years.

Currently over 50 percent of the U.S. population uses non-phosphate detergents. Maryland just recently joined six other states in adopting a ban as part of a comprehensive nutrient control strategy. Such a ban has virtually no cost to state or local governments and minimal costs to consumers.

In recent years, the Virginia General Assembly has opted for continued study of the problems associated with sewage treatment plants. This fall, a new legislative study chaired by state Sen. Joseph Gartlan (D-Fairfax) will examine nutrient enrichment and financing alternatives.

Two facts are already clear:

- The state must develop and act on effective nutrient control strategies as soon as possible.
- More money is needed. Much more. While some of the funds for cleaning up the Bay will continue to come from the federal government for at least the next decade, it is clear that state and local governments must increase their contributions dramatically.

Studies by the Environmental Protection Agency leave no doubt that the estuary and its living resources are in a serious state of decline and that conditions will get worse unless we take action. The quality of life of the Bay depends directly on effective measures to control nutrients.

Teachers awarded mini-grants for special classroom projects

The Virginia Beach Public Schools' Mini-Grant Committee has approved the funding of 21 special teacher projects at schools throughout the division.

The projects will receive various amounts of money up to $400.

The Body Shop's Laser Aligner Measurement apparatus helps align automobile chassis to within a millimeter.

Million dollar facility

Body shop has latest equipment

Checked Flag Motor Car Company has established a new service facility, located at 5255 Virginia Beach Boulevard. The new facility is a five car and truck dealership in Norfolk and Virginia Beach. It is called the Body Shop.

Business

"The Body Shop is a full-service facility," said Walter Novak, Checked Flag's general service manager. "It's more than twice the size of our previous location, and features the most up-to-date equipment in the industry."

Checked Flag relocated its shop at 6541 Virginia Beach

Boulevard to the new 18,000-square-foot shop, located at 5255 Virginia Beach Boulevard.

One main attraction on Checked Flag's body shop is a Paint 'n' Cure downdraft spraybooth. The paint booth creates a specially controlled, dust-free environment to produce the finish. The spraybooth, long a cornerstone of European repair technology, is new to U.S. shops, with only about 40 in operation across the country. Its process uses super-filtered air during both the painting and baking.

"Checked Flag spent a year searching for the best equipment available. We invested $30,000 in the paint booth installation—compared to $10,000 for conventional spraybooths. But it's worth-th it. The difference shows in the factory-quality finish," Novak said.

The Body Shop, which will be open from 8 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Monday thru Friday, also boasts one of the area's only Laser Aligners, a "state-of-the-art" system for aligning a car body. The laser measures the whole car's proportionate alignment, including the top, doors and suspension to the body and chassis. "The precision accuracy achieved with lasers is not possible using conventional techniques," Novak said.

"We can measure right down to within a millimeter, which is very close when you're working with the chassis of an automobile. I think our equipment is far superior to anything on the market today."

In addition, The Body Shop has a parts department. An entire floor of the new shop is devoted to maintaining a $100,000 parts inventory.

The Body Shop will employ 40 workers—more than twice the number of trained technicians at the company's previous shop.

Novak noted, "The staff at our new facility will represent the most outstanding professionals in this field. Consequently, we've gone the extra mile to accommodate them by providing an excellent employee lounge, featuring a kitchen that actually has all the comforts of home, including a refrigerator, a microwave oven, a dishwasher, an icemaker and a television."

Canterbury announces expansion

Westminster-Canterbury of Hampton Roads, Inc. has begun construction of a new Assisted Living Center which will extend its levels of care considerably.

The retirement complex on Shore Drive in Virginia Beach expects to complete the new 37,000 square foot facility by August, 1986 with the aid of financing through a recently approved Bond issue. Construction cost will be $3,500,000 including furnishings and equipment.

Thomas E. Clements, newly-elected President at Westminster-Canterbury, stated, "We have been aware of a growing need among our residents and within the community for an Assisted Living Center which will serve persons who do not need full nursing services, but yet cannot live independently.

"Without this new center, an individual's options would be to continue to cope with the challenges of independent living, or to move into the Health Care Center on a permanent basis. Now there will be another choice which will help ensure independence, privacy and personal dignity."

The new three-story wing will contain 50 new units with private baths. The first floor will contain 14 nursing beds under the existing Certificate of Public Need. The upper two floors will contain 36 assisted living units and will be licensed under the Home for Adults License of the Commonwealth of Virginia. Also included in the new construction is a new and expanded resident clinic, a Physical Therapy Department, staff offices and a classroom for staff training.

The new center will be attached to the existing three-story Health Care Center. The structure is designed so that an additional fourth floor can be added at a future date.

Space in the existing Westminster-Canterbury building being vacated will be renovated into an in-house pharmacy, and an enlarged country store. Clements stressed the benefits to residents which will be realized through the Assisted Living Center.

Lynn Lohrmann, Director of Health Care Services at Westminster-Canterbury, emphasized that the key to life in the Assisted Living Center is independent living, but with supportive services.

"Many persons need a supportive environment for daily living rather than the extensive care delivery system you find in a nursing home," Lohrmann said. "The new Center will provide a structure of services which will allow the resident a maximum range of self-reliance and help when needed."

Westminster-Canterbury was incorporated on November 10, 1976 as a nonstock, nonprofit, Virginia corporation. The Corporation was organized at the direction of the Episcopal Diocese of Southern Virginia and of the Norfolk Presbytery of the Presbyterian Church (USA).

The present facilities have been in operation for over three years and include a 14 story residential building with 339 apartments and for dining, recreational, social and support functions.

W. M. Jordan, Inc. of Newport News is the contractor of the new addition and architects are Shriver and Holland Associates of Norfolk.

Distribution of ad flyers may lead to litter fine

Virginia Beach businesses have been warned that distributing handbills and flyers as advertising tools can bring a $500 fine if the materials are placed in doorways or parked cars in a manner that makes them potential litter sources.

The caution on use of these materials comes from the city's Clean Community Commission, citing two city ordinances which make it unlawful to place handbills, flyers or other advertising matter in doorways or on property if there is the potential for the material to be scattered on the premises. The same holds true for paper-based advertising placed on parked vehicles either on the street or in shopping area parking lots.

"We've been getting quite a number of calls recently about a variety of these materials being scattered around local residences, primarily by small neighborhood businesses," explained Sheila Bogart of the city's Clean Community Commission.

"There are some sources of advertising material that, if properly attached to doorways, such as those plastic bags that fit tightly over doorknobs, are not the potential problem that the loose papers and handbills can become," Bogart continued.

While Bogart emphasizes that the manner of attachment is important when flyers or handbills are distributed, the city ordinances do not provide guidelines on methods of attachment. The way the ordinances may be interpreted is that any potential source of litter scattered in residential or parking areas is considered misdemeanor and could subject the distributor to a fine of up to $500.

Bogart suggests that Virginia Beach citizens who are having problems with local businesses scattering litter-producing advertising materials should call the Clean Community Commission directly with their complaints and be as descriptive as possible. Samples of the flyers may also be mailed to the commission office at the Municipal Center with the complainant's name and date the flyer was received. The commission will contact the police and if the business is a first-time offender a warning will be issued.

"We understand that the city is growing and a lot of new businesses are coming in all the time," Bogart said. "Our main goal is to educate business owners about the laws on litter."

Bogart also emphasized that citizens should not directly call the police with litter complaints. She said they should first call the Clean Community Commission, which has a direct link with the city's law enforcement arm.

Five-year-old Josh Coy grasps the rubber playground ball handed to him from an upper shelf by his mother, Maryanne, and sister, Crystal. The $1,000 shopping spree that they won from a cereal contest was postponed until the return of Lt. Larry Coy, an F-14 pilot, from a Mediterranean deployment.

Instant winner receives more than breakfast cereal

By Katie Clark

"Mom, does anyone ever win these things," asked ten-year old Crystal Coy as she pulled a game card from a box of Alpha-Bit cereal? "Someone does, I guess," answered her mother, Maryanne. Crystal lifted up the flap on the card to reveal that she was an instant winner of a $1,000 shopping spree at Toys "R" Us.

Crystal opened the card on March 30, her brother Josh's fifth birthday, and agreed to share the prize. Crystal and Josh are the children of Lt. Larry Coy, a pilot with Fighter Squadron Forty-One (VF-41), homeported at Naval Air Station Oceana. "The instructions said to send in the card to the cereal company. We did and received verification in July that we were winners," explained Mrs. Coy.

Lieutenant Coy was three weeks into a seven-month deployment when Crystal won the shopping spree. Because he wasn't due home until early October, the spree was scheduled for October 24 so he could share in the experience.

Followed by an entourage of parents, grandparents, store personnel, photographers and reporters, Crystal and Josh began their shopping spree in the toy store about 5:30 p.m. in the computer aisle where they picked up a computer, monitor, printer, disc drive and associated gear. Then, winding their way past games and books, they stopped for the item Crystal wanted most—a skateboard.

Being the true son of a Tomcat pilot, Josh selected a model of an F-14 and a seven-foot model of an aircraft carrier to land it on.

Covering the 35,000 square feet of sales floor in just over an hour, the children filled three baskets with toys (not counting the aircraft carrier). "It has just hit that we are taking home $1,000 worth of toys; where am I going to put them all?" agonized Mrs. Coy.

the city will realize an increase in boat registrations here of 458 boats including 72 boats over 40 feet.

In addition to the increased income from auxiliary sales, he said, the registrations noted on the boats would be excellent advertising for the city. He said Virginia Beach is a city of sports and recreation and should cater to boaters.

Ted Constant, of 3300 Ocean Shore Avenue, said he keeps his boat at the Cavalier where, among the 30 boats there, only his and three others have Virginia Beach registrations. He recommended that the city consider a 50 cent per $100 tax. If the lower tax is not feasible for all boats, he recommended it be applied at least to boats over five tons.

Commissioner of the Revenue Robert Vaughan told Council that a State Commissioners of the Revenue Committee is working on recommendations for the personal property tax, another move to unify taxation in the commonwealth. Among the recommendations would be one for using 100 percent valuation which is already followed by some cities.

Pattie Phillips, director of the city's Research Department, also presented Council with a study on the boat tax presenting alternatives to the present system. They are:

- Reducing the tax rate on all boats. These would have to be reduced significantly to keep boats here, she said.
- Reduce the tax rate on boats weighing five net tons or more.
- Change the assessment method.
- Develop a decal system and proportion.

The report states that states such as Florida, Delaware and Maryland do not provide for personal property taxes on boats.

while Virginia requires the tax. Estimates are that between 130 to 260 boats in Virginia Beach escape local taxation at a loss to the city of $46,000 to $92,000.

Virginia Beach has the largest number of boats registered in the state, according to the Virginia Commission of Game and Inland Fisheries (over 9,000 in 1984 or six percent of the 149,000 boats statewide). After adjustments were made to exclude some boats, such as the military, 7,266 boats were taxes in Virginia Beach in 1984 for net personal property tax billings of $453,858. Over 79 percent paid $100 or less in personal property taxes; 92 percent paid $200 or less; less than eight percent paid over $200; less than one percent paid over $500 (a total of 64 boat owners paid between $500 and $2,700).

The personal property tax rate on boats is the same as the tax on automobiles in Virginia Beach and most other cities. In addition to Portsmouth and Hampton, Elizabeth City also has a low tax rate, 64 cents per $100 valuation and the city does not stress taxation of boats.

In other neighboring cities, the tax rates are $4.75 in Chesapeake, $4.50 in Newport News, and $4 in Norfolk.

One of the biggest deficiencies, Phillips said, is the lack of records. She said that boats unlike automobiles are registered every three years and the follow-up is not the same as it is for automobiles.

Sam Scott, representing the Boat Owners Association of Tidewater-Virginia Beach said that the boat owners want to contribute fairly. He submitted 150 letters written "by the only honest boaters" requesting a reduction in the tax rate.

John Reed who with his wife has just purchased a boat which will be their "floating beach cottage," he said, would pay $700 in taxes if it were a cottage but will cost him $2,500 a year in taxes. He said that the cost is too much for him. "What would you do?" he asked.

He said that out-of-city documentation would be inconvenient for him and that it seems devious. He said that he would rather have his boat registered in Virginia Beach than in Wilmington, Del. or Pueblo, Colo.

Byrum said that a boat that would be taxed $3000 in Virginia Beach will be taxed $500 in Portsmouth.

Also, he said, outside boats will not come to the area.

Councilman John A. Baum said that the low tax (presumably in Portsmouth) is a gimmick and would not last long.

Constant said he is planning to buy another larger boat and is prepared to have his boat documentation elsewhere although he does not want to do that.

The conference is geared to people who assist taxpayers in preparing and filing income tax returns. Preparation of both federal and state returns will be covered.

For information and registration materials, call Tom Baker, Virginia Beach Department of Agriculture/Cooperative Extension Service, 427-4769.

Local fighter psyched

By Cheryl Martin
Virginia Beach welterweight boxer, Curtis Bush, is really "psyched" for his upcoming match at the Pavilion on Saturday, Dec. 21.

"I think this is going to be a good fight for me because I got something I want to prove," Bush said. "I want to show the people of Virginia Beach what I am really capable of doing."

Bush's professional boxing record is four wins, all knockouts, and one lost. His only loss came in a split decision fight at the Pavilion Convention Center last July.

Bush will be featured in a six round, undercard match-up

Bush's opponent in the bout is still to be announced.

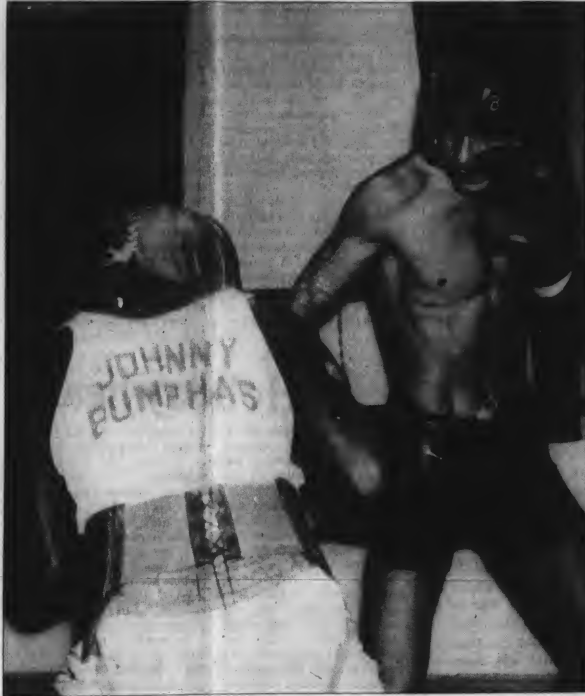

Preparation is basically the same for every fight, Bush said, but knowing who the opponent will be is helpful.

"It's helpful to know fighter's style; whether he is going to go and the inside and slug it out or if he will hang on the outside boxing," he explained. "When you know this you can gear your sparring in the gym to either style."

Bush has been boxing professionally for two years, eight months of which he was out with mononucleosis. He is also a kick boxer and teaches karate for a living.

Because of this busy schedule, Bush says he trains daily to be sure and be in shape for every match.

Bush's career started when he

got into karate at age 13. "I started taking karate because I was really skinny and weak as a kid," he said. "I was always getting picked on and was just looking for a way to defend myself. I fell in love with it and one thing just led to another. I really love it (boxing) to death."

Bush, whose record as a kick boxer is 22 to 3 with 15 knockouts placing him fifth in the world, credits his coach, Dave Miller with getting him into boxing.

How does this 23-year-old spend his time when he isn't working or boxing? He watches the fights on television.

A fighter's career is relatively short, ending at around age 30, Bush explained. For this reason, a person must devote all his time and energy to the sport. One slip up in the ring could result in being knocked out, incurring brain damage or being killed, he added.

"Every fighter knows you have to get out one day," he said. "You just hope you have other options open then. I don't really think about it much, but I guess it will hit me when the time comes. Right now I just think about how I'm going to do in my next fight."

Bush has an associate degree in business management from Tidewater Community College and is considering returning to school to get a bachelor's degree in marketing and advertising.

Craft displays, officer installation highlight event

By Cheryl Martin
Lovely, homemade craft displays and the installation of new council officers highlighted the recent Princess Anne Homemakers Club annual Achievement Day Luncheon.

The Princess Anne Homemakers is made up of seven clubs: Avalon Hills, Busy Bee, Crafty Dozen, Kemps Landing, Lakeview, Ocean Breeze and Thoroughgood, all in Virginia Beach.

Each of the clubs displayed samples of craft projects their group had worked on throughout the year. The displays included an array of needlecrafts, paintings, stuffed animals and wood crafts.

The goal of the Homemakers organization is to help women to become better homemakers. The group is also active in local school, church and community activities.

"My main goal for the Homemakers is have them take a more active interest in community service projects," Helen Truckner, newly elected president of the Princess Anne Homemakers Council, said. "Like for example my club (Thoroughgood) has been making stuffed animals for the Children's Hospital of The King's Daughters. I think these type of projects promote fellowship among the ladies as well as have a positive affect upon the community."

Other officers for 1986-87 include Gene Griffin, vice president; Frances Simpson, secretary; and Louise Frizzell, treasurer. All will serve two-year terms beginning in January 1986.

Each of the clubs presented a brief report on their activities for the year.

Avalon Hills has had a number of interesting speakers during the year covering topics from horticulture to city government.

New Princess Anne Homemakers council officers are (from left) Louise Frizzell, treasurer; Frances Simpson, secretary; Gene Griffin, vice president and Helen Truckner, president.

They have also been active in several community service projects.

Nursing Homes have been the main focus of the Busy Bees projects this year. They have devoted their energies to visiting various homes and making craft gifts for the residents.

For the Crafty Dozen, the primary interest has been compiling a Household Hint Book, which they had on display at the luncheon. They have also donated their time and money to various local service organizations, like Meals on Wheels.

Visiting and sending cards to people in the hospital has kept the Kemps Landing ladies busy this year. They also hosted an Educational Workshop with speakers from the AARP.

Educational programs covering everything from senior citizen discounts to bond issues has been the main activity of the Lakeview group this past year.

Ocean Breeze filled their year with a variety of service projects including Easter treats for the people at Hope Haven and clothing and food donations to needy families in North Carolina.

The Thoroughgood group has sponsored several informative lectures, ranging from "Food of the Future," to "The Aging Process." They made donations to various groups, including the Salvation Army.

Eaton awarded for work

Rick Eaton, 15, of Virginia Beach has been named one of six national winners in the 4-H wildlife and fisheries program.

He received a $1,000 scholarship from the Jeep Corporation and National Wildlife Federation, the program sponsors.

Selected by the Cooperative Extension Service, winners will receive their awards during the 64th National 4-H Congress in Chicago, Dec. 1-5. Awards are arranged by National 4-H Council.

Eaton, son of Mr. and Mrs. Blaine Eaton, is a high school sophomore and plans a career in marine sciences. He is a seven-year 4-H member.

Eaton said he relocates snakes from area parks "so people will not become frightened by them or stop taking boats in rivers. It also prevents people from killing the snakes."

The 4-H'er determined that there are 15 species of snakes in southeastern Virginia and three are poisonous. He said he observed all 15 of them and put together a speech about snakes as part of a public education effort to protect nonpoisonous snakes.

"Most people are afraid of snakes and feel that the only good snake is a dead snake," he said. "My lectures help protect

Venturing into the realm of "Thanksgiving"

For most of us, Thanksgiving conjures up savory visions of scrumptious eatables. Afterall, what is Thanksgiving without a turkey cooked to perfection - golden brown on the outside and juice within - or heaping bowls of mashed potatoes and stuffing? Oh, how can we forget cranberry sauce and that luscious pumpkin pie smothered in whipped cream.

Along with all the feasting comes the happy gathering of relatives from far and wide. Remember Joey is coming with all the children from Baltimore and don't forget fussy Aunt Ethel or Cousin Sue.

Amid all this gluttony and merriment it is sometimes difficult to take the time to reflect on the true purpose of the occasion. Oh, some of us scratch the surface when mentioned "we are thankful for this lovely food and fine friends who grace our table on this day," during the traditional holiday blessing. A few of us may even take time to be thankful for our new car, nice suburban home or the great job we have.

The more adventurous among us may even remember to give thanks for abstracts like freedom, liberty, etc., which reflect that first Thanksgiving held so many years ago.

Perhaps this should be the year for us to stop and take time out of our holiday fun to devote some attention to the spirit of Thanksgiving.

One way of doing this might be to thank the people responsible for the little things that make our lives easier. You know, like the paper boy who rises at 4 a.m., so we can inject the latest news with our morning coffee or the neighbor who loans you all his tools. Then there is the gas station attendant who checks your oil, even though you went to self-service lane or the co-worker who takes time to make coffee for everyone. When you stop and think the list is really quite long, but don't let that intimidate you a simple "thank you" lets them know their efforts are appreciated.

Helping someone less fortunate than yourself to have a joyous holiday celebration is another way to get into the spirit. Donating some canned goods to a local food drive is an easy method of achieving this. How about taking it one step further this year?

"What can I do?" you ask. Try going without desserts for a week or two and using the savings to buy a turkey for a needy family. There is probably an elderly person living alone, who would love to share the holiday with someone. Many civic and church organizations have programs to help the needy at Thanksgiving, any one of them would love some volunteer help in their efforts.

Helping someone else to be thankful is another way to truly enjoy the mood of the holiday. Mothers with small children could really use an afternoon off just to do something frivolous. People who live alone dearly love visits from friends. Think of the people you know there is a little something you can do for each of them.

With a little originality this could be your happiest Thanksgiving holiday. —C.M.

Residents haven't claimed income tax refund checks

There are approximately 73 Virginia Beach residents among the more than 1,700 Virginians who have not claimed their federal income tax refund checks, according to the Internal Revenue Service. These checks, totalling $678,389, were returned to the IRS by the U.S. Postal Service because they were "undeliverable."

This is what happens to the checks when people move and leave no forwarding address or when the information provided on an income tax form is incomplete or incorrect.

Considering all the griping done over paying income taxes, it is amazing that people are not more accurate when filing their returns.

These unclaimed refund checks range in amount from $1 to $7,849, according to the IRS. That is an average of $390 per person, owed by the government that, for some reason, the recipients have not claimed. Perhaps, it is one method of reducing the federal deficit.

This entire situation could have been avoided if people had taken the time to properly fill out the address information on their income tax return. If after having filed a turn the person moves, the new address should be reported to both the IRS and the local postmaster.

The IRS recommends that people use the pre-addressed, peel-off labels, which appear on the cover of the tax packages mailed to individuals each year. This sticker lists the name, address and

State lottery is a vice not a money maker

Editor:

Recently there has been growing support for a state lottery. The supposition that a lottery will be a viable, money making vehicle for Virginia is based on misconception, casual observation and heresy. The contemplation of a lottery is serious business and should be researched thoroughly and soberly.

Billy O'Brien's lottery bill No. 1069 has been tabled by the House Committee on General Laws and should be buried forever.

Evidence shows that a lottery will raise little revenue, create few jobs, raise the unemployment rate, encourage greed, stimulate illegal gambling and boost white collar crime.

Relative to the state budget a lottery would bring in only 1.5% of the total state revenue. It is the equivalent of raising Virginians taxes approximately $25 per taxpayer per year. Since Virginia is a low tax state this increase would not be felt by taxpayers.

As Thanksgiving time draws near Virginia Beach residents begin to look forward to the holiday celebrations that will last through the New Year.

All too often the dinners and parties that are part of holiday festivities feature foods and beverages high in fat, cholesterol and calories.

But enjoying the season's merrymaking doesn't have to mean a break from healthy eating habits. This year start the holidays with a promise to enjoy a healthy and wise Thanksgiving, Hanukkah, Christmas and New Year. It's not so difficult.

Consider the main course of the traditional Thanksgiving dinner—turkey. There are only 613 calories in a three-ounce serving of white meat without the skin. And turkey is relatively low in saturated fats. Skip the gravy, or better yet, learn to make a low-

A lottery is a chance for a prize for a price. It is gambling and a class three misdemeanor. The legalization of a state lottery will be the first step toward allowing private lotteries for it will be setting a precedent.

It is an open invitation to organized crime and we don't need to increase that groups foothold in Virginia.

The lottery industry wants to expand lotteries beyond various ticket and number games. These companies are creating video lotteries, similar to arcade games, and exploring ways to pipe video lotteries into homes by cable television.

Some states that allow the lottery are being urged to set up video lottery machines in public places. The lottery industry even invites being able to add the cost of bets and video games to your home TV cable bill.

Are we so removed from our senses that we will trade our families welfare for a "cheap shot" in our parlors, financed by our friendly TV cable company?

Some claim that a lottery will create new jobs; however, a job creation by legalized gambling is illusory. A lottery funnels money away from the more productive segments of the economy, and therefore creates its jobs at the expense of other parts of the working community. Legalized gambling does not create new jobs; it merely shifts around economic resources.

Lastly, a lottery is a regressive tax, because it is not based on ability to pay. Therefore the poor pay out more, as a percentage of their income, for the lottery than do the rich. Since the poor can least afford this inequity, inducing them to part with their money so that the state can fatten its treasury is abhorrent.

Virginia is a desirable place to live. It is a productive, progressive, yet conservative state. It is a state of character, purpose and destiny; however, as the Virginian Pilot said in one of its editorials "the state should not, in place of courage, decide to go out in the streets, prowling for suckers." It's not the Virginia way.

Holiday health tips fat version. Approach the dressing with discretion, and enjoy plenty of salad and vegetables.

When baking Thanksgiving pumpkin pie substitute evaporated skim milk for the regular evaporated milk, and use three egg whites instead of two whole eggs. Instead of whipped cream, top pie with a low-fat topping. Have a scrumptious holiday meal that won't devastate the waistline.

After making it through the Thanksgiving dinner, one of the biggest downfalls in weight control programs during the holidays is cocktail parties.

Whether it's an office get-together, a neighborhood open house, or a family reunion, the refreshments tend to consist of high calorie snacks and alcoholic beverages.

Instead of high fat finger foods like cheeses or butter cookies, and highly salted munchies like nuts and chips; Fresh vegetables and fruit. Another good tip that will help avoid overindulging at parties is to move away from the refreshment table.

For alcoholic beverages, don't use the holiday season as an excuse to overdo. Not only is alcohol high in calories, but it can present an even more serious, and immediate risk when drinking is mixed with driving. If you do want to enjoy a drink, limit the amount of alcohol, and don't drive after drinking.

Don't let the holidays become an excuse to let your exercise program fall by the wayside. Include exercise with socializing. Schedule a date with friends for a walk or run. Go ice skating or roller skating with the family. Enjoy down-hill or cross-country skiing, or sledding. And have a healthy and safe season.

How to aid choke victim

By C. Everett Koop, M.D.
Surgeon General

More than 3,000 people die from choking in the United States each year. Most choking in adults occurs while they are eating. Meat is the usual culprit. Other foods and objects cause choking, too, especially in young children who, as all parents know, seem to delight in putting all sorts of things into their mouths.

For years medical opinion differed on the best way, or ways, of dislodging an object from the throat of a choking victim. Sharp blows to the back, finger sweeps of the throat and manual thrusts to the chest were methods often recommended.

Today, there is universal agreement that these methods can be dangerous and should not be performed. A back slap or a probing finger, for instance, can drive the foreign object even deeper into the throat. The best rescue technique in any choking situation, doctors now agree, is the Heimlich Maneuver.

The Heimlich Maneuver is safe, effective and easily mastered by the average person. Basically, it requires the rescuer to press sharply and repeatedly on the victim's abdomen, just above the navel, thereby forcing air from the lungs up the airway with such force that it dislodges the obstruction.

The Manuever can be performed on standing or seated victims and on persons who have fallen to the floor. It can be performed on children. Before resorting to the Manuever, however, the first thing the would-be rescuer must do, to the best of his or her ability, is to make sure that the victim actually is choking and not suffering from another condition, such as a heart attack.

Look for the sign of choking that many victims give instinctively by bringing their hands to their throats with thumbs and fingers spread wide. Ask the victim, "Are you choking?" Even if he cannot answer, he may be able to nod affirmatively.

Sometimes, the airway will be only partially blocked, allowing the victim to cough and to breathe to some extent. In most cases, the victim will be able to expel the foreign body without the assistance of another person.

If spontaneous expulsion does not soon occur, however—if breathing becomes more difficult and the victim's distress increases—the Heimlich Maneuver should be started, before the complications of prolonged, inadequate ventilation or complete blockage of the airway can occur.

If the victim does not give the choking sign, look for three more signs that will indicate complete obstruction of the airway: first, an inability to breathe, cough or speak; second, pale skin color that is beginning to turn bluish; and third, loss of consciousness. The Heimlich Maneuver should be started at the first sign of any of these signs.

A more difficult situation is presented when someone is found unconscious and not breathing and no one saw a choking attack take place. If the victim is young (under 30) or a child, and if he is in the vicinity of a restaurant—for instance, in the restroom or hallway leading to it—the rescuer should assume that choking has taken place and should begin the Heimlich Maneuver immediately.

If the situation does not suggest choking, the victim must be treated as a heart attack victim and CPR should be initiated. If there is an obstruction in the airway after all, the rescuer will realize it at once when he is unable to breathe for the victim. The rescuer should immediately initiate the Heimlich Maneuver to clear the blocked air passage.

The trials of living with a football fanatic

By Cheryl Martin

When I promised to love, honor and cherish my husband no one bothered to mention that it meant living with the NFL, USFL and NCAA Football year round!

I'm sure there are many women in Virginia Beach who suffer from "the football widow blues." Let me tell you girls, my husband really reinforces the concept that "Fan" is short for "Fanatic!" Every Saturday, Sunday, Monday Night and sometimes Thursday Night the "Steel Curtain," "Hogs," "Smurfs," and the rest of the gang trample through our living room. Why last week there was even a passing, catching, scoring "Refrigerator"! This hord makes quite a racket as they, usually expertly, pass, tackle and run.

Sometimes as many as five television sets and maybe a radio or two compete to be heard. Over all of them can be heard the thunderings of "Coach Martin" as he instructs players and coaches alike on what action to take or more often what they should have done. He gets so loud, our old neighbors didn't speak to us for months because they thought all we did was fight! Finally one day the neighbor realized it was the television and not me he was abusing.

My husband truly believes that his watching the game and who watches it with him can affect the outcome. Why he once asked a friend to leave during an important game, simply because he was from Cleveland! Each weekend I plan zillions of projects to keep myself entertained while my husband watches the gorillas of the gridiron, but it never fails as soon as I get busy he starts screaming "come ere quick." Now his tone always leads me to believe something dreadful has occurred. Frantically I dash into the living room expecting the worst only to be told "watch this play, it's unbelievable," or "chug this out, the ref doesn't know what he is doing. My team's getting beaten with bad calls." The ultimate is when he says I need you to watch this play for good luck," at least he needs me.

Actually, football is a science as well as a ritual for my husband. Every sports page printed in the last six years in our garage collecting dust and turning yellow—hasn't found even one page he lost or used to pack boxes. These priceless documents contain every possible statistic a football freak could possibly need. I mean really, how can a person attempt to predict the outcome of a game without knowing such vital information as who plays better in mud or snow, which team has won the most previous match-ups and who played on which high school and college teams together?

Sometimes I am truly amazed at how much information my husband carries in his head about football—I guess that's why he forgets what I tell him! He'll sit and read off play-by-plays on games that were played in the '60s (in the days of poor football).

My husband is a mathematician, which serves to aid him in his football calculations. By mid season he has studied all the possible outcomes of the season and can explain just who has to beat whom to boost his team in the rankings. It is really quite complicated and too involved to get into here. One almost has to be a genius to truly understand the game of football. There is even a system that correlates the number on a player's jersey with his position in the field. Once my husband tried to get me to memorize this system to help me better understand the action in the game. Diligently I studied for weeks but to no avail.

What I find even more intriguing is some of the bizzard

Standards of Quality funding falls short

LET'S TALK

By Gary Blumenstein, president, Virginia Education Association

NOTE: This column is excerpted from the Virginia Education Association's Report on Financing the Standards of Quality.

The Virginia public, largely unaware of the Standards of Quality, are aware that they expect and want and will pay for real improvement from where education is today. When the Standards of Quality are fully funded, their guidelines represent a measurement that falls short of today's education in actuality.

The Governor's Commission on Virginia's Future states unreservedly that "Education should be the highest priority of this Commonwealth." They perceptively identify "Virginia's most important resource" as "the minds of its citizens." Believing, "Nothing will have a greater impact on this Commonwealth than the elevation of its education systems," they propose that Virginia seek to become a national leader, specifically, "Virginia should rank among the top ten states in the quality of education it offers."

"We must never let this nation forget the incontestable correlation between education spending and the productivity of our work force, the health of our economy, and the security of our people," says Chairman of the House Education and Labor Committee, A. F. Hawkins.

Those who demean a child graduating and reading at a less than 12th-grade level, ignore his or her predecessor's parallel: dropping out with less education and a lower reading ability. Those who say "good riddance" to the 10th-grade dropout with 6th-grade reading ability, ignore that his or her "riddance" is better than a predecessor's with no appreciable reading ability, or employability.

Those who seek only Aristotiles are likely to find few. Those who seek equal opportunity and support for all will find more. The income taxes of all the Rhodes scholars in history will not keep America running long enough to read this report. The floor rises not to spite the critic aristocrats but to help them stand taller too.

Educational excellence is a relative term but an inflexible value. It may be the first high school graduate or collegian in a family as well as graduation with honors from an elite college. It may be employment at a company as well as the presidency of it. It is to all people of all stations an advantage clearly desired and a benefit within the Commonwealth's means to provide.

The people see it and support it.

Food budget effected by planning strategy

Gayle Zytron, Virginia Beach Extension Agent, said when planning a budget, consider a survey conducted by the United States Department of Agriculture.

According to latest figures, a family of four, including a husband, wife, and two preschoolers, on a moderate food budget, spends $82.50 a week on food. The same size families with liberal and thrifty budgets spend $100.80 and $54.30 respectively.

Figures for couples with two children between the ages of 6 and 11 are $62.40, thrifty; $99.20, moderate; and $119.20 with liberal budgets.

The average retired couple with no dependents spends $55.40 a week on a moderate food plan. Those families with a thrifty budget would spend $35.30. Younger couples with no dependents spend only $2-$3 more each week.

These figures assume that all meals and snacks are prepared at home. There is a variation if meals are bought outside of the home.

Basic Finance classes will be taught this month at the Virginia Beach Department of Agriculture and the Kempsville Recreation Center by Zytron.

Local agency named one of 500 fastest-growing companies

Barker Campbell & Farley Advertising and Public Relations has been named to INC Magazine's list of America's 500 fastest-growing private companies. The Virginia Beach agency, listed in the magazine's December issue under its corporate name, Communications Consultants, Inc., was ranked 55 on the list.

Ad notes

To qualify for the top 500 distinction, companies must be privately held and at least five years old; have fiscal 1980 sales of at least $100,000 but no more than $25 million; have a 1984 sales volume exceeding that of 1983; and show a steady pattern of growth during the past five years.

Barker Campbell & Farley, the only Virginia Beach area agency named to the list, was established in 1980 by Robert A. Barker, William T. Campbell and A. Palmer Farley. At that time, the agency had zero billing and one employee. After five and one-half years, Barker Campbell & Farley has grown to annual capitalized billings of $12 million and 34 employees.

A. Palmer Farley, an executive vice president and partner with the agency attributes the firm's rapid growth to several factors. "We have only outstanding, experienced professionals on our team that are truly committed to creative excellence," said Farley. "Our media planning, research and buying department is one of the strongest in the Southeast and we offer solid public relations service that has an outstanding record of creativity and press placement success."

The agency's clients range geographically from New England to the Mid-West and in to the Southeast. Barker Campbell & Farley operates a Health Care Division as well as an Agricultural/Horticultural Division. In addition, it services a wide array of clients, including some in the financial, media, governmental, travel, industrial and food products fields. Campbell also stressed that an objective-oriented approach underscores every project the agency undertakes. "Our philosophy of business is 'outstanding creative can happen only through solid marketing direction,'" he said.

factors that have an effect on the outcome of a game. Did you know it makes a difference when an east and west coast team play, which coast it is on. Yes, the scenario is, I think, when west coast teams have to play in the east, they are at a disadvantage because they aren't accustomed to playing so early in the morning, thus east coast teams gain three hours preparation time when they play out west—or maybe it's the other way around.

To add insult to injury, my husband and I attended rival universities and once a year I must face the fateful day when they go head-to-head. It doesn't help any that his team has won 99 percent of the games. For weeks before and after this event I am tormented by stories of helpless Mountaineers being eaten alive by Lions. The only thing that is worse is when, by some miracle, my team wins. I really hate seeing a grown man fall apart completely.

As I do try to find something good in every situation, I suppose I can find something good about football. Let's see...I guess there are worse vices for a man to have than being hung up on football. When he could crack his knuckles! But seriously, I can say that football has helped me to see more of our beautiful country. Truly I have frozen half to death in stadiums in the Northeast and fried at southern and western games.

Now back to the point of all this, much to the discontent of football widows, like myself, the NFL and NCAA Football organizations have ideal occasions for the most hotly contested match-ups. At least they give us Christmas off!

But Thanksgiving Day is fast upon us girls. Aside from New Year's, this is a favorite among gridders. Be prepared to pass the turkey as quarterback backs pass the pigskins in the background, and may your pumpkin pie "score!"

Eaton has used live snakes in some of his public education work. He said in his project he learned to observe wildlife without scaring it off.

"I love watching a family of animals relate to each other when they are not aware they are being watched," he said.

Eaton has done extensive work with fish and has worked at fishing tournaments, including one at which a 553-pound blue marlin, nearly 12 feet long, was brought in. A number of sharks also were brought in and most of them "were still alive and still snapping their jaws," he said.

Customers given second chance to choose long distance company

Continental Telephone of Virginia customers in Virginia Beach who have not yet selected a primary long distance company are being notified in a letter of the long distance company to which they are being assigned.

About half of Contel's customers in Virginia Beach made a choice of long distance companies on the first ballot

Spence Kiser, Contel's superintendent of telephone services in Virginia Beach said it is important for Contel customers to choose a long distance company.

Making a choice on the first or second ballot is free of charge. After a choice is made, changing companies will incur a $5 service charge. Customers who make no choice on either ballot remain with their assigned company; they also will incur the service charge if they want to change to another company after June 15, 1986.

With Easy Dialing, callers can dial "1" (or "O"), plus the area code and number, and call over the long distance carrier of their choice. Today, dialing "1" (or "O") connects callers only with AT&T. Lengthy access codes must be dialed to gain a connection with any other long distance company where available.

Customers in Princess Anne, Pungo, Shipp's Corner, Battlefield and Great Bridge, with phone numbers beginning with 426, 427, 468, 482, and 721, will have Easy Dialing, except for party-line, coin or charge-a-call phones. Long distance calls for these exceptions will continue to be handled as they are now.

Both Contel and the long distance companies prefer that customers make their choices and mail in their ballots as soon as possible.

If a customer is already using one of the long distance companies on Contel's Easy Dialing list and wants to remain with the company, the ballot must be so marked and returned. Customers now using a long distance company not on the Easy Dialing list can continue to do so the same way as now.

Contel is providing Easy Dialing so its customers may take advantage of competition in the long distance business. After a federal court ordered Bell Telephone companies to provide equal access, Contel arranged for several long distance companies to provide comparable connections and competitive prices for Contel customers.

Easy Dialing Virginia Beach is the first place it's being offered in the nation-wide Continental Telephone System.

Resident wins $1,000

Geraldine Capp (center), of Virginia Beach won this year's Homearama Energy Saver Home Essay Contest, sponsored by the Tidewater Builders Association. The $1,000 prize may be used as credit on her electric bill or a downpayment on an energy saver residence. mailed to them. The other half are being assigned at random to the four long distance companies offering equal access, called "Easy Dialing" by Contel.

The notification of assignment will also include a "second-chance" ballot which gives Contel's customers another opportunity to specify which company they want to provide their long distance service after December 15. Customers may choose from four companies: TDX Systems, Inc., GTE Sprint, MCI, or AT&T.

Setting and achieving financial goals

Doris Mozley

Last week my column dealt with how Virginia Beach residents can get started on a financial plan by budgeting and preparing a personal balance sheet. This week's column talks about how to set realistic goals and how to go about achieving them.

Most people are concerned about taxes, inflation, and getting a good return, so they worry where to invest their money. Yet, many people have no very clear idea of what they want to accomplish. This is rather like putting the cart before the horse.

Deciding where to invest money is one of the last steps in the financial planning process. Before beginning to think about investing money, know where you are and where you want to go.

Decide short and long-term goals. Perhaps you want to buy a house or a car, or take a vacation in the near future. Long-term goals might include preparing for retirement or planning to start a new business.

It's important to list all goals and set priorities. Since most of us cannot afford to achieve all our goals, we should concentrate on those that are most important to us first.

When defining goals, try to be as specific as possible. General statements such as "I want to send my kids to college" are hard to plan for. It's much easier to plan by quantifying goals in terms of dollar need and time, such as "I want to provide $4,000 a year in today's dollars when my son enters college in five years."

Setting quantitative goals, make it easier to determine how much to save each year to reach those goals and which investments are most appropriate for those needs.

In the next three articles I will discuss three major financial objectives which many investors are concerned about. They will include: 1) Funding for a college education; 2) Providing for a surviving spouse and family in case the wage earner dies prematurely; and 3) Attaining financial independence.

For Virginia Beach residents year-end tax planning takes on particular importance this year due to possibility of reductions in the tax rate in 1986 under the Reagan or alternative tax proposals, according to Richard R. Lammers, partner in charge of Tax, Norfolk office with the accounting firm of Peat Marwick.

There are six areas which merit attention before the end of the year state and local tax payments, sales of property, tax shelter investments, charitable contributions, interest payments, and contributions to IRA, Keogh, and 401(k) plans.

Lammer recommends acting early to save the most income, where possible, should be deferred until 1986, and opportunities should be sought to take deductions in 1985 instead of 1986.

State and Local Taxes are itemized deductions in the year in which they are paid, and the timing of the deduction is within the control of the individual. Final installment of estimated 1985 state income tax, typically due in early 1986, can be paid before the end of 1985.

Local real estate taxes due early in 1986 also may be prepaid. If they are paid through a bank or other escrow agent, the deduction can be taken only in the year in which the bank or agent pays the taxes. Therefore, to take the deduction in 1985, have the bank or escrow agent make the payment before year end.

Property Sales because of the prospect of lower tax rates under the various tax proposals, many people are putting off a decision to sell property, particularly property which is used as a vacation home or which is held for investment purposes. Such property may be sold this year and the gain put off until next year.

This is accomplished by entering into a contract now, but deferring the receipt of proceeds until 1986.

The rules continue to be different for a primary residence. As long as the residence bought is more expensive than the one sold, there is no capital gains tax.

Tax Shelters 1985 may present several "last chance" opportunities for tax deductions through a tax shelter. There are certain tax benefits that may end if any of the proposals are adopted. A tax shelter entered into this year could offer tax benefits which will not be available in 1986. At the same time, it could defer income until 1986 or 1987, when the tax rate may be lower.

Charitable Deductions for those who do not itemize their deductions, there is a significant change. In 1985, taxpayers who don't itemize may still deduct up to 50 percent of their charitable contributions.

There is also an important new requirement affecting those contributing property to charity. If the value of that property is greater than $5,000 ($10,000 in the case of closely held corporate stock) an appraisal made within 60 days of the gift by a qualified appraiser must be attached to the 1985 return.

The mileage allowance for the use of an automobile in charitable services has risen from nine cents a mile in 1984 to 12 cents a mile for 1985. Interest deductions are allowed in the year they are due and paid. Most mortgage interest is paid after it is due. Therefore, payments usually made in January of 1986 represent interest due for 1985 and may be deducted if paid prior to year end. The same concept applies to most interest payments on credit card and consumer loan balances.

IRA, Keogh, and 401(k) Plans find out where to get the greatest rate of return. IRA contributions for 1985 must be made by April 15, 1986. The funds to make these contributions may be borrowed, and the interest on that loan is tax deductible.

The self-employed may open Keogh plans which have higher contribution limits. It must be established before Dec. 31, 1985, even though contributions to the plan are not required until the extended due date of the return.

A 401(k) retirement plan participant may seek to have his or her plan contributions increased or decreased before year-end to increase or decrease income for 1985.

playing at the Number 1 position her senior year.

Cho, a business administration major at Longwood, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Yun-whi Cho.

Judith Fugate and Medhi Bahiri highlight performance of "The Nutcracker."

Christmas classic to be performed at Pavilion

"The Nutcracker" performed by the Old Dominion University Ballet and the Virginia Symphony will be at the Pavilion Theater Saturday, Dec. 7 at 8 p.m. and Sunday, Dec. 8 at 3 p.m.

During the past 10 years, the collaboration has united local amateur dancers with professional musicians. Since 1976, the ballet has brought in professional dancers to highlight "The Nutcracker" and provide invaluable experience to the university dancers.

This year's production offers the audience an extra special treat by featuring more than the traditional two headlining dancers.

Old Dominion is casting a female in the role of Herr Drosselmeier, who presents the enchanted nutcracker to this goddaughter, Clara, on Christmas Eve. The part is being played by Mary Peacock, a former Old Dominion dance student.

Another Old Dominion student, Lisa Gillespie, who will be dancing the role of the Snow Queen, is a former member of the San Francisco Ballet who came to the university this year to study dance.

The two students, along with the university ballet company, will be performing with guest artists Judith Fugate, soloist with the New York City Ballet, and Medhi Bahiri, a free-lance soloist who has just finished a guest engagement with the National Ballet of Canada.

Fugate will dance the role of the Sugarplum Fairy and Bahiri will dance the role of her Cavalier.

Tickets for the Pavilion performances are $8, $10 and $12, and are on sale at the Pavilion box office and all branches of First Virginia Bank of Tidewater.

For ticket information call the Pavilion box office at 428-4222.

The Virginia Beach performances are funded in part by the city of Virginia Beach through the Virginia Beach Arts and Humanities Commission.

Etiquette and sportsmanship good bowling partners

By Dawn Baldwin

Etiquette and sportsmanship are winning partners in any sport. In the game of tennis, a code of etiquette has been established and accepted by bowlers everywhere. Few of these rules are official, but bowlers should be courteous and give consideration at all times to the rights of others.

The Women's International Bowling Congress has prepared a pamphlet entitled "Bowling Etiquette" which includes the following suggestions for making your bowling more enjoyable:

•Be ready to bowl when it's your turn.

•Take your time, but don't waste time once you are on the approach.

•Stay on your own approach at all times and return to the back of the approach after throwing your ball.

•The bowler on the right is the right of way.

•Do not use another player's ready to bowl, be courteous not distracting.

•Respect the equipment, don't loft the ball.

•Play to win, but be a gracious loser.

If you would like a copy of this pamphlet ask your league secretary or contact a member of the board of directors of your local association.

ball, except with her permission.

•The approach may not be to your liking but you CAN NOT use chalk, resin, powder, etc. on the lanes. It's a rule violation.

•Good bowling requires concentration. When a player is

Don't have to bake turkey dressing

Turkey dressing is often part of the traditional holiday meal.

It doesn't have to be baked inside the turkey, though, one easy way to prepare it is to bake it in a regular baking dish in the oven.

Those who are going to stuff a dressing in the turkey need to be sure the internal cavity is clean. Then prepare the stuffing, put it in the turkey and place the turkey in the oven immediately.

Any delay gives harmful bacteria time to grow before being killed by the heat of the oven.
